INDUCTION

[Warkworth. Before Northumberland's Castle]

Enter Rumour, painted full of tongues.

Rum. Open your ears; for which of you will stop
The vent of hearing when loud Rumour speaks?
I, from the orient to the drooping west,
Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold 4
The acts commenced on this ball of earth:
Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,
The which in every language I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports. 8
I speak of peace, while covert enmity
Under the smile of safety wounds the world:
And who but Rumour, who but only I,
Make fearful musters and prepar'd defence, 12
Whilst the big year, swoln with some other grief,
Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,
And no such matter? Rumour is a pipe
Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures, 16
And of so easy and so plain a stop
That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
The still-discordant wavering multitude,
Can play upon it. But what need I thus 20
My well-known body to anatomize
Among my household? Why is Rumour here?

S. d. Enter Rumour, etc.; cf. n.      2 vent: aperture      4 still: always 17 stop: hole in wind instrument by which difference of pitch is obtained

I run before King Harry's victory;
 Who in a bloody field by Shrewsbury 24
 Hath beaten down young Hotspur and his troops,
 Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
 Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I
 To speak so true at first? my office is 28
 To noise abroad that Harry Monmouth fell
 Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword,
 And that the king before the Douglas' rage
 Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death. 32
 This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns
 Between the royal field of Shrewsbury
 And this worm-eaten hole of ragged stone,
 Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland, 36
 Lies crafty-sick. The posts come tiring on,
 And not a man of them brings other news
 Than they have learn'd of me: from Rumour's tongues
 They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs. Exit. 40

ACT FIRST

Scene One

[The Same]

Enter Lord Bardolph, at one door.

L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here? ho!

[Enter the Porter above.]

Where is the earl?

Port. What shall I say you are?

24 Shrewsbury; cf. n.

33 peasant: provincial

37 crafty-sick: feigning sickness

2 What: who

29 Harry Monmouth; cf. n.

35 hole; cf. n.
tiring: riding until they are tired

L. Bard.

Tell thou the earl

That the Lord Bardolph doth attend him here.

Port. His Lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard: 4

Please it your honour knock but at the gate,
And he himself will answer.

Enter Northumberland.

L. Bard.

Here comes the earl.

North. What news, Lord Bardolph? every minute
now

Should be the father of some stratagem. 8

The times are wild; contention, like a horse
Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose
And bears down all before him.

L. Bard.

Noble earl,

I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury. 12

North. Good, an God will!

L. Bard.

As good as heart can wish.

The king is almost wounded to the death;
And, in the fortune of my lord your son,
Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts 16
Kill'd by the hand of Douglas; young Prince John
And Westmoreland and Stafford fled the field;
And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk Sir John,
Is prisoner to your son: O! such a day, 20
So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won,
Came not till now to dignify the times
Since Cæsar's fortunes.

North.

How is this deriv'd?

Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury? 24

L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence;

3 attend: await

4 orchard: garden

13 an: if

19 brawn: the fleshy part of the body, especially the buttocks or the calf of the leg

21 follow'd: carried through

A gentleman well bred and of good name,
That freely render'd me these news for true.

North. Here comes my servant Travers, whom I sent 28

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

L. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way;
And he is furnish'd with no certainties
More than he haply may retail from me. 32

Enter Travers.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings comes with you?

Tra. My lord, Sir John Umfrevile turn'd me back
With joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd,
Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard 36

A gentleman, almost forspent with speed,
That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse.
He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him
I did demand what news from Shrewsbury. 40

He told me that rebellion had bad luck,
And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.
With that he gave his able horse the head,
And, bending forward, struck his armed heels 44
Against the panting sides of his poor jade
Up to the rowel-head, and, starting so,
He seem'd in running to devour the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha! Again: 48

Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold?
Of Hotspur, Coldspur? that rebellion
Had met ill luck?

L. Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what:
If my young lord your son have not the day, 52

30 over-rode: passed

43 able: active

37 forspent: exhausted

48 Staying: awaiting question: talk

Upon mine honour, for a silken point
I'll give my barony: never talk of it.

North. Why should the gentleman that rode by Travers

Give then such instances of loss?

L. Bard. Who, he?

56

He was some hilding fellow that had stolen
The horse he rode on, and, upon my life,
Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter Morton.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf, 60
Foretells the nature of a tragic volume:
So looks the strond, whereon the imperious flood

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury? 64

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord;
Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask
To fright our party.

North. How doth my son, and brother?
Thou tremblest, and the whiteness in thy cheek 68
Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.

Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night, 72
And would have told him half his Troy was burn'd;
But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death ere thou report'st it.

This thou wouldst say, 'Your son did thus and thus; 76
Your brother thus; so fought the noble Douglas';
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds:

But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed,
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, 80

53 point: lacing, garter

57 hilding: worthless

62 strond: shore

63 witness'd usurpation: traces of its usurpation

69 apter: more ready

Ending with 'Brother, son, and all are dead.'

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet;
But, for my lord your son,—

North. Why, he is dead.—

See, what a ready tongue suspicion hath! 84

He that but fears the thing he would not know
Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes
That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak, Morton:
Tell thou thy earl his divination lies, 88

And I will take it as a sweet disgrace
And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great to be by me gainsaid;
Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain. 92

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's dead.
I see a strange confession in thine eye:

Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear or sin
To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so; 96
The tongue offends not that reports his death:
And he doth sin that doth belie the dead,
Not he which says the dead is not alive.

Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news 100
Hath but a losing office, and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,
Remember'd knolling a departing friend.

L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead. 104

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to God I had not seen;
But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state,
Rendering faint quittance, wearied and outbreath'd, 108

To Harry Monmouth; whose swift wrath beat down
The never-daunted Percy to the earth,

From whence with life he never more sprung up.
 In few, his death,—whose spirit lent a fire 112
 Even to the dullest peasant in his camp,—
 Being bruited once, took fire and heat away
 From the best-temper'd courage in his troops;
 For from his metal was his party steel'd; 116
 Which once in him abated, all the rest
 Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead:
 And as the thing that's heavy in itself,
 Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed, 120
 So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss,
 Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear
 That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim
 Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety, 124
 Fly from the field. Then was that noble Worcester
 Too soon ta'en prisoner; and that furious Scot,
 The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword
 Had three times slain the appearance of the king, 128
 'Gan vail his stomach, and did grace the shame
 Of those that turn'd their backs; and in his flight, Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all
 Is, that the king hath won, and hath sent out 132
 A speedy power to encounter you, my lord,
 Under the conduct of young Lancaster
 And Westmoreland. This is the news at full.

North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn. 136

In poison there is physic; and these news,
 Having been well, that would have made me sick,
 Being sick, have in some measure made me well:
 And as the wretch, whose fever-weaken'd joints, 140

112 In few: in short

116-118 Cf. n.

129 'Gan vail his stomach: began to lower his arrogant spirit did grace: reflected credit on, set in a good light

114 bruited: rumored

128 Cf. n.

Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life,
 Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire
 Out of his keeper's arms, even so my limbs, Weaken'd with grief, being now enrag'd with grief, 144
 Are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch!

A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel
 Must glove this hand: and hence, thou sickly quoif!
 Thou art a guard too wanton for the head 148
 Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit.
 Now bind my brows with iron; and approach
 The ragged'st hour that time and spite dare bring
 To frown upon the enrag'd Northumberland! 152
 Let heaven kiss earth! now let not nature's hand
 Keep the wild flood confin'd! let order die!
 And let this world no longer be a stage
 To feed contention in a lingering act; 156
 But let one spirit of the first-born Cain
 Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set
 On bloody courses, the rude scene may end,
 And darkness be the burier of the dead! 160

Tra. This strained passion doth you wrong, my lord.

L. Bard. Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Mor. The lives of all your loving complices
 Lean on your health; the which, if you give o'er 164
 To stormy passion, must perforce decay.

141 buckle: bend

145 nice: dainty, effeminate

148 wanton: effeminate

149 flesh'd: made fierce by combat as a dog fed only on flesh

151 ragged'st: roughest

161 strained passion: exaggerated emotion

144 grief: suffering      grief: sorrow

147 sickly quoif: sick man's hood

163 complices: allies

You cast the event of war, my noble lord,
 And summ'd the account of chance, before you said,
 'Let us make head.' It was your presumise 168
 That in the dole of blows your son might drop:
 You knew he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge,
 More likely to fall in than to get o'er;
 You were advis'd his flesh was capable 172
 Of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit
 Would lift him where most trade of danger rang'd:
 Yet did you say, 'Go forth'; and none of this,
 Though strongly apprehended, could restrain 176
 The stiff-borne action: what hath then befallen,
 Or what hath this bold enterprise brought forth,
 More than that being which was like to be?

L. Bard. We all that are engaged to this loss 180
 Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas
 That if we wrought out life 'twas ten to one;
 And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd
 Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd; 184
 And since we are o'erset, venture again.
 Come, we will all put forth, body and goods.

Mor. 'Tis more than time: and, my most noble
 lord,
 I hear for certain, and do speak the truth, 188
 The gentle Archbishop of York is up,
 With well-appointed powers: he is a man
 Who with a double surety binds his followers.
 My lord your son had only but the corpse, 192
 But shadows and the shows of men to fight;
 For that same word, rebellion, did divide
 The action of their bodies from their souls;

166-179 Cf. n.	166 cast the event: considered the outcome
168 make head: raise an army	169 dole: distribution
170 edge: dangerous narrow path	172 advis'd: aware
177 stiff-borne: obstinately carried out
180 engaged to: involved in	184 respect: consideration
190 well-appointed: well-equipped

And they did fight with queasiness, constrain'd, 196
 As men drink potions, that their weapons only Seem'd on our side: but, for their spirits and souls,
 This word, rebellion, it had froze them up,
 As fish are in a pond. But now the bishop 200
 Turns insurrection to religion:
 Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts,
 He's follow'd both with body and with mind,
 And doth enlarge his rising with the blood 204
 Of fair King Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones;
 Derives from heaven his quarrel and his cause;
 Tells them he doth bestride a bleeding land,
 Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke; 208
 And more and less do flock to follow him.
North. I knew of this before; but, to speak truth,
 This present grief had wip'd it from my mind.
 Go in with me; and counsel every man 212
 The aptest way for safety and revenge:
 Get posts and letters, and make friends with speed:
 Never so few, and never yet more need. Exeunt.

Scene Two

[London. A Street]

Enter Sir John [Falstaff,] with his Page bearing his sword and buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water; but, for the party that owed it, 4 he might have moe diseases than he knew for.

196 queasiness: squeamishness

204 enlarge: widen the scope or appeal

209 more and less: high and low

4 owed: owned

204, 205 Cf. n.

208 Bolingbroke; cf. n.

214 make: collect

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me: the brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent anything that tends 8 to laughter, more than I invent or is invented on me: I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath overwhelmed all 12 her litter but one. If the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment. Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my 16 cap than to wait at my heels. I was never manned with an agate till now; but I will set you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a 20 jewel; the juvenal, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand than he shall get one on his cheek; and yet he will not stick 24 to say, his face is a face-royal: God may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amiss yet: he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it; and yet he'll 28 be crowing as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said Master Dombledon about the 32 satin for my short cloak and my slops?

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph; he would not

6 gird: jeer

15 whoreson: a coarse term of endearment (as here) or of contempt (as in l. 39)

16 mandrake: a poisonous plant whose forked root was supposed to resemble the human form

21 juvenal: used jocularly for 'youth'

29 writ man: enrolled himself a man

18 manned with an agate; cf. n.

25 face-royal; cf. n.

33 slops: loose breeches

take his bond and yours: he liked not the 36 security.

Fal. Let him be damned like the glutton! Pray God his tongue be hotter! A whoreson Achitophel! a rascally yea-forsooth knave! to bear a 40 gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security. The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is through with them in 44 honest taking up, then they must stand upon security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth as offer to stop it with security. I looked a' should have sent me two and twenty 48 yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it: and yet 52 cannot he see, though he have his own lanthorn to light him. Where's Bardolph?

Page. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse. 56

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: an I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and wived. 60

Enter Chief Justice and Servant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him. 64

38 glutton; cf. n.

40 yea-forsooth knave; cf. n.

bear . . . in hand: delude with false hopes

42 smooth-pates: round-heads, or Puritanical citizen class

44 through: serious

45 taking up: obtaining goods on trust

61, 62 Cf. n.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Ser. Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery? 68

Ser. He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the Lord John of Lancaster. 72

Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back again.

Ser. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf. 76

Page. You must speak louder, my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of anything good. Go, pluck him by the elbow; I 80 must speak with him.

Ser. Sir John!

Fal. What! a young knave, and beg! Is there not wars? is there not employment? doth not 84 the king lack subjects? do not the rebels want soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name 88 of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Ser. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldier- 92 ship aside, I had lied in my throat if I had said so.

Ser. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiership aside, and give me leave to 96 tell you you lie in your throat if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou gett'st 100 any leave of me, hang me: if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt counter: hence! avaunt!

Ser. Sir, my lord would speak with you. 104

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord! God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lord- 108 ship abroad; I heard say your lordship was sick: I hope your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish 112 of the saltness of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your 116 expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales. 120

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty. You would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy. 124

Ch. Just. Well, God mend him! I pray you, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of 128 sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise: I would my means were greater and my waist slenderer. 164

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog. 168

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gall a new-healed wound: your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gads-hill: you may thank the unquiet time for your 172 quiet o'er-posting that action.

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf. 176

Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out. 180

Fal. A wassail candle, my lord; all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your 184 face but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravy, gravy, gravy.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel. 188

Fal. Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light, but I hope he that looks upon me will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go, I cannot tell. Virtue is of 192

so little regard in these costermonger times that true valour is turned bear-herd: pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls; and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye, a dry hand, a yellow cheek, a white beard, a decreasing leg, an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken, your wind short, your chin double, your wit single, and every part about you blasted with antiquity, and will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, Sir John!

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice, I have lost it with hollaing, and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not: the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him! For the box o' the ear that the prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack.

Ch. Just. Well, God send the prince a better companion! 228

Fal. God send the companion a better prince!
I cannot rid my hands of him.

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath severed you and Prince Harry. I hear you are going with 232 Lord John of Lancaster against the archbishop and the Earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yea; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady 236 Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily:
if it be a hot day, and I brandish anything but 240
my bottle, I would I might never spit white again.
There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head but I am thrust upon it. Well, I cannot last ever. But it was always yet the trick of 244 our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If you will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God my name were not so terrible to the 248 enemy as it is: I were better to be eaten to death with rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion.

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest; and 252
God bless your expedition.

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth?

Ch. Just. Not a penny; not a penny; you are 256 too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well:

commend me to my cousin Westmoreland.

[Exeunt Chief Justice and Servant.]

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle.

A man can no more separate age and covetous- 260
ness than a' can part young limbs and lechery;
but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches
the other; and so both the degrees prevent my curses. Boy! 264

Page. Sir!

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Fal. I can get no remedy against this con- 268
sumption of the purse: borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable.
Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster;
this to the prince; this to the Earl of Westmore- 272 land; and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair on my chin. About it: you know where to find me. A pox of this gout! 276 or, a gout of this pox! for the one or the other plays the rogue with my great toe. 'Tis no matter if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more 280 reasonable. A good wit will make use of any-

Scene Three

[York. The Archbishop's Palace]Enter Archbishop, Hastings, Mowbray, and Lord Bardolph.Arch. Thus have you heard our cause and known our means;And, my most noble friends, I pray you all,
Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes:

And first, Lord Marshal, what say you to it? 4

Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our arms;
But gladly would be better satisfiedHow in our means we should advance ourselves
To look with forehead bold and big enough 8
Upon the power and puissance of the king.Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file
To five-and-twenty thousand men of choice;
And our supplies live largely in the hope 12
Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns
With an incensed fire of injuries.L. Bard. The question, then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus:Whether our present five-and-twenty thousand 16
May hold up head without Northumberland.Hast. With him, we may.L. Bard. Ay, marry, there's the point:
But if without him we be thought too feeble,
My judgment is, we should not step too far 20
Till we had his assistance by the hand;
For in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this,
Conjecture, expectation, and surmise
Of aids incertain should not be admitted. 24

Arch. 'Tis very true, Lord Bardolph; for, indeed
It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury.

L. Bard. It was, my lord; who lin'd himself with hope,

Eating the air on promise of supply, 28

Flattering himself with project of a power

Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts;

And so, with great imagination

Proper to madmen, led his powers to death, 32

And winking leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt
To lay down likelihoods and forms of hope.

L. Bard. Yes, if this present quality of war,— 36

Indeed the instant action,—a cause on foot,

Lives so in hope, as in an early spring

We see the appearing buds; which, to prove fruit,

Hope gives not so much warrant as despair 40

That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,

We first survey the plot, then draw the model;

And when we see the figure of the house,

Then must we rate the cost of the erection; 44

Which if we find outweighs ability,

What do we then but draw anew the model

In fewer offices, or at last desist

To build at all? Much more, in this great work,— 48

Which is almost to pluck a kingdom down

And set another up,—should we survey

The plot of situation and the model,

Consent upon a sure foundation, 52

Question surveyors, know our own estate,

How able such a work to undergo,

To weigh against his opposite; or else,

27 lin'd: strengthened

29, 30 project . . . smaller: anticipation of an army actually much

33 winking: with eyes closed

30-41 Cf. n.

43 figure: plan

47 offices: domestic quarters

53-55 Cf. n.

We fortify in paper, and in figures, 56
 Using the names of men instead of men:
 Like one that draws the model of a house
 Beyond his power to build it; who, half through,
 Gives o'er and leaves his part-created cost 60
 A naked subject to the weeping clouds,
 And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant that our hopes, yet likely of fair birth,
 Should be still-born, and that we now possess'd 64
 The utmost man of expectation;
 I think we are a body strong enough,
 Even as we are, to equal with the king.

L. Bard. What! is the king but five-and-twenty thousand? 68

Hast. To us no more; nay, not so much, Lord Bardolph.

For his divisions, as the times do brawl,
 Are in three heads: one power against the French,
 And one against Glendower; perforce, a third 72
 Must take up us: so is the unfirm king
 In three divided, and his coffers sound
 With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Arch. That he should draw his several strengths together 76

And come against us in full puissance,
 Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so,
 He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh
 Baying him at the heels: never fear that. 80

L. Bard. Who is it like should lead his forces hither?

Hast. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmoreland;

60 part-created cost: costly fragment

70 as . . . brawl: as the turbulent times dictate

62 churlish: rough

81 like: probable

Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Monmouth:
But who is substituted 'gainst the French 84
I have no certain notice.

Arch.

Let us on

And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited. 88
A habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O thou fond many! with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke 92
Before he was what thou wouldst have him be:
And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up. 96
So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard,
And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times? 100

They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him die,
Are now become enamour'd on his grave:
Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head,
When through proud London he came sighing on 104
After the admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Cry'st now, 'O earth! yield us that king again,
And take thou this!' O, thoughts of men accurst!
Past and to come seem best; things present worst. 108

Mowb. Shall we go draw our numbers and set on?

Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt.]

91 fond many: foolish multitude

94 trimm'd . . . desires: supplied with what thou didst desire

109 draw: assemble

ACT SECOND

Scene One

[London. A Street]

Enter Hostess [Quickly of the Tavern], with two Officers, Fang and Snare.

Host. Master Fang, have you entered the action?

Fang. It is entered.

Host. Where's your yeoman? Is't a lusty 4 yeoman? will a' stand to 't?

Fang. Sirrah!—where's Snare?

Host. O Lord, ay! good Master Snare.

Snare. Here, here. 8

Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Falstaff.

Host. Yea, good Master Snare; I have entered him and all. 12

Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab.

Host. Alas the day! take heed of him: he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most 16 beastly. In good faith, a' cares not what mischief he doth if his weapon be out: he will foin like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child. 20

Fang. If I can close with him I care not for his thrust.

Host. No, nor I neither: I'll be at your elbow. 24

Fang. An I but fist him once; an a' come but within my vice,—

Host. I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score. 28 Good Master Fang, hold him sure: good Master Snare, let him not 'scape. A' comes continually to Pie-corner—saving your manhoods—to buy a saddle; and he's indited to dinner to the Lub- 32 ber's Head in Lumbert Street, to Master Smooth's the silkman: I pray ye, since my exion is entered, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred 36 mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear; and I have borne, and borne, and borne; and have been fubbed off, and fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this day to that day, that it is a 40 shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing; unless a woman should be made an ass, and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong. Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmsey- 44 nose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, Master Fang and Master Snare; do me, do me, do me your offices.

Enter Falstaff, and Bardolph.

Fal. How now! whose mare's dead? what's 48 the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets! Draw, Bardolph: cut 52 me off the villain's head; throw the quean in the channel.

Host. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou 58 bastardly rogue! Murder, murder! Ah, thou honey-suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the king's? Ah, thou honey-seed rogue! thou art a honey-seed, a man-queller, and a 60 woman-queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two! 64
Thou wo't, wo't thou? thou wo't, wo't ta? do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Fal. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe. 68

Enter Chief Justice.

Ch. Just. What is the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you, stand to me! 72

Ch. Just. How now, Sir John! what! are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time and business? You should have been well on your way to York. Stand from him, fellow: wherefore hang'st upon him? 76

Host. O, my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum? 80

53 quean: hussy

58 honey-suckle: Dame Quickly's error for 'homicidal'

Host. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his: but I will have some of <sup>84</sup> it out again, or I will ride thee o' nights like the mare.

Fal. I think I am as like to ride the mare if I have any vantage of ground to get up. <sup>88</sup>

Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fie! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to <sup>92</sup> come by her own?

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself and the money too. Thou didst swear <sup>96</sup> to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Wheeson week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his <sup>100</sup> father to a singing-man of Windsor, thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, <sup>104</sup> the butcher's wife, come in then and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar; telling us she had a good dish of prawns; whereby thou didst desire to eat some, <sup>108</sup> whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarity with such poor people; saying that ere 112 long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath:

 deny it if thou canst. 116

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says up and down the town that her eldest son is like you. She hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. 120
 But for those foolish officers, I beseech you I may have redress against them.

Ch. Just. Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the 124 true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration; you 128 have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and in person.

Host. Yea, in troth, my lord. 132

Ch. Just. Prithee, peace. Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villainy you have done her: the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance. 136

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness: if a man will make curtsy, and say nothing, he is virtuous. No, my lord, 140 my humble duty remembered, I will not be your suitor: I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs. 144

Fal. Come hither, hostess. 148

[Taking her aside.]

Enter Master Gower.

Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower! what news?

Gow. The king, my lord, and Harry Prince of Wales

Are near at hand: the rest the paper tells.

[Gives a letter.]

Fal. As I am a gentleman. 152

Host. Faith, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, 156
I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy walls, a pretty slight drollery, or the 160 story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound if thou canst. Come, an it were 164 not for thy humours, there's not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw the action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I 168 know thou wast set on to this.

so God save me, la! 172

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift:
you'll be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper. You'll 176 pay me all together?

Fal. Will I live? [To Bardolph.] Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on.

Host. Will you have Doll Tearsheet meet 180
you at supper?

Fal. No more words; let's have her.

*Exeunt Hostess, [Bardolph, Page,]

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my lord? 184

Ch. Just. Where lay the king last night?

Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well: what is the news, my lord? 188

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back?

Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse,
Are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster,
Against Northumberland and the archbishop. 192

Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble
lord?

Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently.
Come, go along with me, good Master Gower.

Fal. My lord! 196

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here; 200
I thank you, good Sir John.

Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go. 204

Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gower?

Ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, 208 he was a fool that taught them me. This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair.

Ch. Just. Now the Lord lighten thee! thou 212 art a great fool. Exeunt.

Scene Two

[The Same]

Enter Prince Henry [and] Poins.

Prince. Before God, I am exceeding weary.

Poins. Is 't come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood. 4

Prince. Faith, it does me, though it dis-colours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer? 8

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition.

Prince. Belike then my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now re- 12

member the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name, or to know 16 thy face to-morrow! or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast; viz. these, and those that were thy peach-coloured ones! or to bear the inventory of thy shirts; as, one for 20 superfluity, and another for use! But that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I, for it is a low ebb of linen with thee when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great 24 while, because the rest of thy low-countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland: and God knows whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom; but the 28 midwives say the children are not in the fault; whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have 32 laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?

Prince. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Poins. Yes, faith, and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prince. It shall serve among wits of no higher 40 breeding than thine.

Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

Prince. Marry, I tell thee, it is not meet that 44 I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee,—as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend,—I could be sad, and sad indeed too. 48

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.

Prince. By this hand, thou thinkest me as far in the devil's book as thou and Falstaff for obduracy and persistency: let the end try the 52 man. But I tell thee my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick; and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow. 56

Poins. The reason?

Prince. What wouldst thou think of me if I should weep?

Poins. I would think thee a most princely 60 hypocrite.

Prince. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks: never a man's thought in the world 64 keeps the road-way better than thine: every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?

Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd 68 and so much engrafted to Falstaff.

Prince. And to thee.

Poins. By this light, I am well spoke on; I can hear it with mine own ears: the worst that 72 they can say of me is that I am a second brother and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and those two things I confess I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph. 76

Bard. God save your Grace! 80

Prince. And yours, most noble Bardolph.

Poins. [To the Page.] Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man-at- 84 arms are you become! Is 't such a matter to get a pottle-pot's maidenhead?

Page. A' calls me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his 88 face from the window: at last, I spied his eyes, and methought he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new petticoat, and peeped through.

Prince. Hath not the boy profited? 92

Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Page. Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away! 96

Prince. Instruct us, boy; what dream, boy?

Page. Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she was delivered of a firebrand; and therefore I call him her dream. 100

Prince. A crown's worth of good interpretation. There 'tis, boy. [Gives him money.]

Poins. O! that this good blossom could be kept from cankers. Well, there is sixpence to 104 preserve thee.

Bard. An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

Prince. And how doth thy master, Bardolph? 108

86 pottle-pot: two-quart tankard
95-100 Cf. n.

88 red lattice: ale-house window
104 cankers: canker-worms

Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your Grace's coming to town: there's a letter for you.

Poins. Delivered with good respect. And how doth the martlemas, your master? 112

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dies not. 116

Prince. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place, for look you how he writes.

Poins. [looking over the Prince's shoulder.] 120
'John Falstaff, knight,'—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself: even like those that are kin to the king, for they never prick their finger but they say, 'There's 124 some of the king's blood spilt.' 'How comes that?' says he that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer is as ready as a borrower's cap, 'I am the king's poor cousin, sir.' 128

Prince. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter: 'Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king nearest his father, Harry Prince of 132 Wales, greeting.'

Poins. Why, this is a certificate.

Prince. Peace! 'I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity:' 136

Poins. He sure means brevity in breath, short-winded.

Prince. 'I commend me to thee, I commend conceive: understand thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with 140 Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayest, and so farewell.

‘Thine, by yea and no,—which is as 144 much as to say, as thou usest him,
Jack Falstaff, with my familiars;
John, with my brothers and sisters, and Sir John with all Europe.’ 148

Poins. My lord, I’ll steep this letter in sack and make him eat it.

Prince. That’s to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must 152
 I marry your sister?

Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune!—but I never said so.

Prince. Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds 156 and mock us. Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yea, my lord.

Prince. Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old frank? 160

Bard. At the old place, my lord, in East-cheap.

Prince. What company?

Page. Ephesians, my lord, of the old church. 164

Prince. Sup any women with him?

Page. None, my lord, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet.

Prince. What pagan may that be? 168

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master’s.

Prince. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull. Shall we steal upon them, 172

Ned, at supper?

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

Prince. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph; no 176 word to your master that I am yet come to town: there's for your silence. [Gives money.]

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it. 180

Prince. Fare ye well; go. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.] This Doll Tearsheet should be some road.

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Albans and London. 185

Prince. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two leathern jerkins and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers. 191

Prince. From a god to a bull! a heavy descension! it was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice! a low transformation! that shall be mine; for in every thing the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. Exeunt

Scene Three

[Warkworth. Before Northumberland's Castle]

Enter Northumberland, his wife, and the wife to Harry Percy.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,

Give even way unto my rough affairs:
 Put not you on the visage of the times,
 And be like them to Percy troublesome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no more:
 Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas! sweet wife, my honour is at pawn;
 And, but my going, nothing can redeem it.

Lady P. O! yet for God's sake, go not to these wars.

The time was, father, that you broke your word
 When you were more endear'd to it than now;
 When your own Percy, when my heart's dear
 Harry,

Threw many a northward look to see his father
 Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain.
 Who then persuaded you to stay at home?
 There were two honours lost, yours and your son's: 16
 For yours, the God of heaven brighten it!
 For his, it stuck upon him as the sun
 In the grey vault of heaven; and by his light
 Did all the chivalry of England move 20
 To do brave acts: he was indeed the glass
 Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves:
 He had no legs, that practis'd not his gait;
 And speaking thick, which nature made his blemish, 24
 Became the accents of the valiant;
 For those that could speak low and tardily,
 Would turn their own perfection to abuse,
 To seem like him: so that, in speech, in gait, 28
 In diet, in affections of delight,
 In military rules, humours of blood,
 He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
 That fashion'd others. And him, O wondrous him! 32

11 endear'd: *bound*29 affections of delight: *favorite pastimes*24 thick: fast
30 blood: disposition

O miracle of men! him did you leave,—
Second to none, unseconded by you,—
To look upon the hideous god of war
In disadvantage; to abide a field 36
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name
Did seem defensible: so you left him.
Never, O! never, do his ghost the wrong
To hold your honour more precise and nice 40
With others than with him: let them alone.
The marshal and the archbishop are strong:
Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,
To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck, 44
Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

North. Beshrew your heart,
Fair daughter! you do draw my spirits from me
With new lamenting ancient oversights.
But I must go and meet with danger there, 48
Or it will seek me in another place,
And find me worse provided.

Lady N. O! fly to Scotland,
Till that the nobles and the armed commons
Have of their puissance made a little taste. 52

Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the king,
Then join you with them, like a rib of steel,
To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves,
First let them try themselves. So did your son; 56
He was so suffer'd: so came I a widow;
And never shall have length of life enough
To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven, 60
For recordation to my noble husband.

North. Come, come, go in with me. 'Tis with my mind

As with the tide swell'd up unto his height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way: 64
Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back.
I will resolve for Scotland: there am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company. 68

Exeunt.

Scene Four

[London. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern, in Eastcheap]

Enter two Drawers [Francis and another].

First Draw. What the devil hast thou brought there? apple-johns? thou knowest Sir John cannot endure an apple-john.

Sec. Draw. Mass, thou sayst true. The prince 4 once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns; and, putting off his hat, said, 'I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old withered 8 knights.' It angered him to the heart; but he hath forgot that.

First Draw. Why then, cover, and set them down: and see if thou canst find out Sneak's 12 noise; Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music. Dispatch: the room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight.

Sec. Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince 16 and Master Poins anon; and they will put on

2 apple-johns: apples that keep well but become very much shriveled 11 cover: set the table 13 noise: band of musicians

two of our jerkins and aprons; and Sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word. 20

First Draw. By the mass, here will be old utis: it will be an excellent stratagem.

Sec. Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak.

Exit.

Enter Hostess and Doll.

Host. I' faith, sweetheart, methinks now you 24 are in an excellent good temperality: your pul-sidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose; in good truth, la! But, i' faith, 28 you have drunk too much canaries, and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say, What's this? How do you now? 32

Dol. Better than I was: hem!

Host. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lo! here comes Sir John.

Enter Falstaff [singing].

Fal. 'When Arthur first in court'—Empty 36 the jordan.—[Exit Drawer.]'—'And was a worthy king.' How now, Mistress Doll!

Host. Sick of a calm: yea, good faith.

Fal. So is all her sect; an they be once in a 40 calm they are sick.

Dol. A pox damn you, you muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll. 44

21, 22 old utis: rare sport
37 jordan: chamber-pot
40 sect: sex

36 Cf. n.
39 calm: mistake for 'qualm'

Dol. I make them! gluttony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll: we 48 catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my poor virtue, grant that.

Dol. Yea, joy, our chains and our jewels.

Fal. 'Your brooches, pearls, and owches':— 52 for to serve bravely is to come halting off, you know: to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely,— 56

Dol. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion; you two never meet but you fall to some discord: 60 you are both, i' good truth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confirmities. What the good-year! one must bear, and that must be you: you are the weaker 64 vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Dol. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshead? there's a whole merchant's venture of Bordeaux stuff in him: you have not 68 seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares. 72

Enter Drawer [Francis].

Fran. Sir, Ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

52 Cf. n. owches: jewels

57 conger: eel

63 good-year: corruption of French 'goujere,' 'the pox'

73 Ancient: ensign or second lieutenant, Peto being Captain Faistaff's first lieutenant

56 chambers: small cannon

61 rheumatic: error for 'splenetic' (?)

Dol. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouthedest rogue 76 in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith; I must live among my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers: I am in good name 80 and fame with the very best. Shut the door; there comes no swaggerers here: I have not lived all this while to have swaggering now: shut the door, I pray you. 84

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Host. Pray ye, pacify yourself, Sir John: there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient. 88

Host. Tilly-fally, Sir John, ne'er tell me: your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the deputy, t'other day; and, as he said to me,—'twas no longer ago 92 than Wednesday last,—'I' good faith, neighbor Quickly,' says he;—Master Dumbe, our minister, was by then;—'Neighbour Quickly,' says he, 'receive those that are civil, for,' said he, 'you are in 96 an ill name'; now, a' said so, I can tell where-upon; 'for,' says he, 'you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive: receive,' says he, 'no swag- 100 gering companions.' There comes none here:—you would bless you to hear what he said. No, I'll no swaggerers.

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame 104 cheater, i' faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he'll not swagger with a Barbary hen if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance. Call him up, drawer. 108

[Exit Francis.]

Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; but I do not love swaggering, by my troth; I am the worse, when one says swagger. Feel, masters, 112 how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Dol. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I? yea, in very truth, do I, an 'twere an aspen leaf: I cannot abide swaggerers. 116

Enter Ancient Pistol, and Bardolph and his boy.

Pist. God save you, Sir John!

Fal. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon mine hostess. 120

Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her. 124

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs nor no bullets: I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to you, Mistress Dorothy; I will 128 charge you.

Dol. Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue. 132 away! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy.

Dol. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy

130 companion: a term of contempt

132 mate: fellow, 'chap'

bung, away! By this wine, I'll thrust my knife 136 in your mouldy chaps an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal!
you basket-hilt stale juggler, you! Since when,
I pray you, sir? God's light! with two points 140 on your shoulder? much!

Pist. God let me not live but I will murder your ruff for this!

[Attacking her, and tearing her ruff.]

Fal. No more, Pistol: I would not have you 144 go off here. Discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Host. No, good captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain. 148

Dol. Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out for taking their names 152 upon you before you have earned them. You a captain, you slave! for what? for tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-house? He a captain! Hang him, rogue! He lives upon 156 mouldy stewed prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's light, these villains will make the word captain as odious as the word 'occupy,' which was an excellent good word before it was 160 ill sorted: therefore captains had need look to 't.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Fal. Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I; I tell thee what, Corporal Bar- 164

136 bung: slang for 'sharper'

dolph; I could tear her. I'll be revenged of her.

Pist. I'll see her damned first; to Pluto's 168 damned lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dogs! down faitors. Have we not Hiren here? 172

Host. Good Captain Peesel, be quiet; 'tis very late, i' faith. I beseek you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed! Shall packhorses, 176

And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia.
Which cannot go but thirty mile a day,
Compare with Cæsars, and with Cannibals,
And Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them with 180
King Cerberus; and let the welkin roar.
Shall we fall foul for toys?

Host. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words. 184

Bard. Be gone, good ancient: this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men like dogs! give crowns like pins! Have we not Hiren here? 188

Host. O' my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think
I would deny her? for God's sake! be quiet.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat, my fair Calipolis. 192
Come, give's some sack.

Si fortune me tormente, sperato me contento.

Fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend give fire:

[Laying down his sword.]

Come we to full points here, and are et ceteras nothing?

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neif. What! we have seen the seven stars. 200

Dol. For God's-sake, thrust him down stairs!
I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. 'Thrust him down stairs!' know we not Galloway nags? 204

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shovegroat shilling: nay, an a' do nothing but speak nothing, a' shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs. 208

Pist. What! shall we have incision? Shall we imbrue? [Snatching up his sword.]

Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!
Why then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds

Untwine the Sisters Three! Come, Atropos, I say! 212

Host. Here's goodly stuff toward!

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw. 216

Fal. Get you down stairs. [Drawing.]

Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these tirrits and frights. So; murder, I warrant now. Alas, alas! 220 put up your naked weapons; put up your naked weapons. [Exeunt Bardolph and Pistol.]

Host. Are you not hurt i' the groin? me-thought a' made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

[Enter Bardolph.]

Fal. Have you turned him out o' doors? 228

Bard. Yea, sir: the rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, i' the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal, to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, 232 poor ape, how thou sweatest! Come, let me wipe thy face; come on, you whoreson chops. Ah, rogue! i' faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, 236 and ten times better than the Nine Worthies. Ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket. 240

Dol. Do, an thou darest for thy heart: an thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Fal. Let them play. Play, sirs. Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging slave! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver.

Dol. I' faith, and thou followedst him like a 248 church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days,

234 chops: fat-face

Enter [behind] the Prince and Poins, disguised [like Drawers].

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's head: do' not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour's the prince of? 256

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: a' would have made a good pantler, a' would have chipped bread well.

Dol. They say, Poins has a good wit. 260

Fal. He a good wit! hang him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard: there is no more conceit in him than is in a mallet.

Dol. Why does the prince love him so, then? 264

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness, and a' plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fennel, and drinks off candles' ends for flapdragons, and rides the wild mare with the boys, 268 and jumps upon joint-stools, and swears with a good grace, and wears his boots very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg, and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other 272 gambol faculties a' has, that show a weak mind

Poins. Let's beat him before his whore. 280

Prince. Look, whether the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance? 284

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanack to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, 288 his man, be not lispig to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses.

Dol. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most 292 constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all. 296

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money o' Thursday; shalt have a eap to-morrow. A merry song! come: it grows late; we'll to bed. Thou'lt forget me when I 300 am gone.

Dol. By my troth, thou'lt set me a-weeping an thou sayst so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return. Well, hearken at the 304 end.

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king's? And art not thou Poins his brether?

Prince. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead! 312

Fal. A better than thou: I am a gentleman; thou art a drawer.

Prince. Very true, sir; and I come to draw you out by the ears. 316

Host. O! the Lord preserve thy good Grace; by my troth, welcome to London. Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu! are you come from Wales? 320

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty, by this light flesh and corrupt blood [pointing to Doll], thou art welcome.

Dol. How, you fat fool! I scorn you. 324

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how 328 vilely did you speak of me even now before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman!

Host. God's blessing of your good heart! and so she is, by my troth. 332

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

Prince. Yea; and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gadshill: you knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try 336 my patience.

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

Prince. I shall drive you then to confess the 340 wilful abuse; and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, o' mine honour; no abuse. 844

Prince. Not to dispraise me, and call me pantler and bread-chipper and I know not what?

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse! 848

Fal. No abuse, Ned, in the world; honest Ned, none. I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him; in which doing I have done the part of a careful 352 friend and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal; none, Ned, none: no, faith, boys, none.

Prince. See now, whether pure fear and 356 entire cowardice doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or 360 honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked?

Poins. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph 364 irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy, there is a good angel about him; but the devil outbids him too. 368

Prince. For the women?

Fal. For one of them, she is in hell already, and burns poor souls. For the other, I owe her money; and whether she be damned for that, I 372 know not.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which I think thou wilt howl.

Host. All victuallers do so: what's a joint of 380 mutton or two in a whole Lent?

Prince. You, gentlewoman,—

Dol. What says your Grace?

Fal. His Grace says that which his flesh 384 rebels against.

Peto knocks at door.

Host. Who knocks so loud at door? Look to the door there, Francis.

Enter Peto.

Prince. Peto, how now! what news? 388

Peto. The king your father is at Westminster;
And there are twenty weak and wearied posts
Come from the north: and as I came along,
I met and overtook a dozen captains, 392
Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns,
And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

Prince. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame,
So idly to profane the precious time, 396
When tempest of commotion, like the south,
Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt
And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.
Give me my sword and cloak. Falstaff, good night. 400

Exeunt Prince and Poins [Bardolph and Peto].

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence and leave it unpicked. [Knocking within.] More knocking at the door!

404

[Enter Bardolph.]

How now! what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently; A dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. [To the Page]. Pay the musicians, sirrah. 408 Farewell, hostess, farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after: the undeserver may sleep when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches. 412 If I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go.

Dol. I cannot speak; if my heart be not ready to burst,—well, sweet Jack, have a care 416 of thyself.

Fal. Farewell, farewell.

Exit [Falstaff, with Bardolph].

Host. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peascod- 420 time; but an honest, and truer-hearted man, —well, fare thee well.

Bard. [Within.] Mistress Tearsheet!

Host. What's the matter?

424

Bard. [Within.] Bid Mistress Tearsheet come to my master.

Host. O! run, Doll, run; run, good Doll. Come!

She comes blubbered. 428

Yea, will you come, Doll?

Exeunt.

ACT THIRD

Scene One

[Westminster. The Palace]

Enter the King in his night-gown, with a Page.

King. Go, call the Earls of Surrey and of Warwick;

But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters,
And well consider of them. Make good speed.

[Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects 4
Are at this hour asleep! O sleep! O gentle sleep!
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frightened thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
And steep my senses in forgetfulness? 8

Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,
And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber,
Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great, 12
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody?

O thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile
In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch 16
A watch-case or a common 'larum bell?

Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast
Seel up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains
In cradle of the rude imperious surge, 20
And in the visitation of the winds,

Who take the ruffian billows by the top,
Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them
With deaf'ning clamour in the slippery clouds, 24

S. d. night-gown: dressing gown

17 watch-case: sentry-box

19 Seel: sew together (a hawking term)

That with the hurly death itself awakes?
 Canst thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose
 To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude,
 And in the calmest and most stillest night, 28
 With all appliances and means to boot,
 Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, lie down!
 Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter Warwick and Surrey.

War. Many good morrows to your majesty! 32

King. Is it good morrow, lords?

War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past.

King. Why then, good morrow to you all, my lords.
 Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you? 36

War. We have, my liege.

King. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom,
 How foul it is; what rank diseases grow,
 And with what danger, near the heart of it. 40

War. It is but as a body, yet distemper'd,
 Which to his former strength may be restor'd
 With good advice and little medicine:
 My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd. 44

King. O God! that one might read the book of fate,

And see the revolution of the times
 Make mountains level, and the continent,—
 Weary of solid firmness,—melt itself 48
 Into the sea! and, other times, to see
 The beachy girdle of the ocean
 Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,
 And changes fill the cup of alteration 52
 With divers liquors! O! if this were seen,
 The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,
 What perils past, what crosses to ensue,

25 hurly: tumult

Would shut the book, and sit him down and die. 56

'Tis not ten years gone

Since Richard and Northumberland, great friends,

Did feast together, and in two years after

Were they at wars: it is but eight years since 60

This Percy was the man nearest my soul,

Who like a brother toil'd in my affairs

And laid his love and life under my foot;

Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard 64

Gave him defiance. But which of you was by,—

[To Warwick.] You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember,—

When Richard, with his eye brimful of tears,

Then check'd and rated by Northumberland, 68

Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy?

'Northumberland, thou ladder, by the which

My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne';

Though then, God knows, I had no such intent, 72

But that necessity so bow'd the state

That I and greatness were compelled to kiss:

'The time shall come,' thus did he follow it,

'The time will come, that foul sin, gathering head, 76

Shall break into corruption':—so went on,

Foretelling this same time's condition

And the division of our amity.

War. There is a history in all men's lives, 80

Figuring the nature of the times deceas'd;

The which observ'd, a man may prophesy,

With a near aim, of the main chance of things

As yet not come to life, which in their seeds 84

And weak beginnings lie intreasured.

Such things become the hatch and brood of time;

And by the necessary form of this

68 check'd: rebuked

87 necessary form: logical necessity

81 Figuring: symbolizing

King Richard might create a perfect guess 88
 That great Northumberland, then false to him,
 Would of that seed grow to a greater falseness,
 Which should not find a ground to root upon,
 Unless on you.

King. Are these things then necessities? 92
 Then let us meet them like necessities;
 And that same word even now cries out on us.
 They say the bishop and Northumberland
 Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, my lord! 96
 Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
 The numbers of the fear'd. Please it your Grace
 To go to bed: upon my soul, my lord,
 The powers that you already have sent forth 100
 Shall bring this prize in very easily.
 To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
 A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
 Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill, 104
 And these unseason'd hours perforce must add Unto your sickness.

King. I will take your counsel:
 And were these inward wars once out of hand,
 We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land. 108

Exeunt.

Scene Two

[Before Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire]

Enter Shallow and Silence, with Mouldy, Shadow, Wart, Feeble, Bullcalf [and Servants].

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early stirrer, by the rood! And how doth my good cousin Silence? 4

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bed-fellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen? 8

Sil. Alas! a black ousel, cousin Shallow!

Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar. He is at Oxford still, is he not? 12

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost.

Shal. A' must, then, to the inns o' court shortly. I was once of Clement's Inn; where I think they will talk of mad Shallow yet. 16

Sil. You were called 'lusty Shallow' then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called anything; and I would have done anything indeed too, 20 and roundly too. There was I, and Little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele a Cotswold man; you had not four such swinge-buck- 24 lers in all the inns o' court again: and, I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were, and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and 28 page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same. I 32 see him break Skogan's head at the court gate, when a' was a crack not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's Inn. Jesu! Jesu! 36 the mad days that I have spent; and to see how many of my old acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very 40 sure: death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. By my troth, I was not there. 44

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Jesu! Jesu! dead! a' drew a good 48 bow; and dead! a' shot a fine shoot: John a Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead! a' would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score; and carried you a fore- 52 hand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. How a score of ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good 56 ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think. 60

Enter Bardolph, and his Boy.

Shal. Good morrow, honest gentlemen.

Bard. I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's 64 justices of the peace: what is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you; my captain, Sir John Falstaff: a tall gentleman, 68 by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir. I knew him a good backword man. How doth the good knight? may I ask how my lady his wife doth? 72

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. 'Better accommodated!' 76 it is good; yea indeed, is it: good phrases are surely and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated! it comes of accommodo: very good; a good phrase. 80

Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word. 'Phrase,' call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, 84 and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or, when a man is, being, whereby, a' may be thought to be 88 accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Enter Falstaff.

Shal. It is very just. Look, here comes good Sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my troth, you 92 look well and bear your years very well: welcome, good Sir John.

68 tall: doughty

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow. Master Surecard, as I think. 96

Shal. No, Sir John; it is my cousin, Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace. 100

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fie! this is hot weather, gentlemen. Have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men? 104

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll? Let me see, let me see, 108 So, so, so, so, so, so, so: yea, marry, sir: Ralph Mouldy! let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so. Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Moul. Here, an't please you. 112

Shal. What think you, Sir John? a good-limbed fellow; young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy? 116

Moul. Yea, an't please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! things that are mouldy lack use: very singular 120 good. In faith, well said, Sir John; very well said.

Fal. Prick him.

Moul. I was pricked well enough before, an 124 you could have let me alone: my old dame will be undone now for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery: you need not to have pricked me;

there are other men fitter to go out than I. 128

Fal. Go to: peace, Mouldy! you shall go.
Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace! stand aside: know 132 you where you are? For the other, Sir John:
let me see. Simon Shadow!

Fal. Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under: he's like to be a cold soldier. 136

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shad. My mother's son, sir. 140

Fal. Thy mother's son! like enough, and thy father's shadow: so the son of the female is the shadow of the male: it is often so, indeed; but not of the father's substance. 144

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer; prick him, for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book. 148

Shal. Thomas Wart?

Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart? 152

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him, Sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is 156 built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins: prick him no more.

147 shadows: names, for which we receive pay, though we have not the men

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well. Francis Feeble! 160

Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir? 164

Fal. You may; but if he had been a man's tailor he'd have pricked you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat? 168

Fee. I will do my good will, sir: you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant 172 as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse. Prick the woman's tailor; well, Master Shallow; deep, Master Shallow.

Fee. I would Wart might have gone, sir. 176

Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou mightst mend him, and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier that is the leader of so many thousands: let that 180 suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Fee. It shall suffice, sir.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble. Who is next? 184

Shal. Peter Bullcalf o' the green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let's see Bullcalf.

Bull. Here, sir.

Fal. 'Fore God, a likely fellow! Come, prick 188 me Bullcalf till he roar again.

Bull. O Lord! good my lord captain,—

Fal. What! dost thou roar before thou art pricked? 192

Bull. O Lord, sir! I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir; a cough, sir, which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs 196 upon his coronation day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown; we will have away thy cold; and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for 200 thee. Is here all?

Shal. Here is two more called than your number; you must have but four here, sir: and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner. 204

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O, Sir John, do you remember since we 208 lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's field?

Fal. No more of that, good Master Shallow, no more of that. 212

Shal. Ha! 'twas a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive?

Fal. She lives, Master Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me. 216

Fal. Never, never; she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow.

Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to the heart. She was then a bona-roba. Doth she 220 hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain she's old; and had Robin 224

Nightwork by old Nightwork before I came to Clement's Inn.

Sil. That's fifty-five years ago.

Shal. Ha! cousin Silence, that thou hadst 228 seen that that this knight and I have seen. Ha!
Sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight,
Master Shallow. 232

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have. Our watchword was, 'Hem boys!' Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner. Jesus, the days that we 236 have seen! Come, come.

Excunt [Falstaff, Shallow, and Silence].

Bull. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and here's four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had 240 as lief be hanged, sir, as go: and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends: else, sir, I did 244 not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Moul. And, good Master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend: she has 248 nobody to do anything about her, when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself.
You shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside. 252

Fee. By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once; we owe God a death. I'll ne'er bear a base mind: an't be my destiny, so; an't be not, so. No man's too good to serve's prince; 256 and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said; thou'rt a good fellow.

Fee. Faith, I'll bear no base mind. 260

Enter Falstaff and the Justices.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four, of which you please.

Bard. [To Falstaff.] Sir, a word with you.
I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullcalf. 264

Fal. [Aside to Bardolph.] Go to; well.

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have?

Fal. Do you choose for me. 268

Shal. Marry, then, Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble, and Shadow.

Fal. Mouldy, and Bullcalf: for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service: and for 272 your part, Bullcalf, grow till you come unto it: I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong: they are your likeliest men, and I would 276 have you served with the best.

Fal. Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thewes, the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man! 280 Give me the spirit, Master Shallow. Here's Wart; you see what a ragged appearance it is: a' shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer, come off and on 284 swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow, give me this man: he presents no mark to the enemy; the foeman may with as great aim level 288 at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreat;

how swiftly will this Feeble the woman's tailor run off! O! give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a caliver into Wart's 292 hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So: very well: go to: very good: exceeding good. 296
O, give me always a little, lean, old, chopp'd, bald shot. Well said, i' faith, Wart; thou'rt a good scab: hold, there's a tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his craft's master, he doth 300 not do it right. I remember at Mile-end Green, when I lay at Clement's Inn,—I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's show,—there was a little quiver fellow, and a' would manage you his 304 piece thus: and a' would about and about, and come you in, and come you in; 'rah, tah, tah,' would a' say; 'bounce,' would a' say; and away again would a' go, and again would a' come: I 308 shall never see such a fellow.

Fal. These fellows will do well, Master Shallow. God keep you, Master Silence: I will not use many words with you. Fare you well, gentle- 312 men both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to-night. Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Shal. Sir John, the Lord bless you! God prosper your affairs! God send us peace! At your 316 return visit our house; let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure I will with ye to the court.

On, Bardolph; lead the men away.

[Exit Bardolph, with recruits.]

As I return, I will fetch off these justices:
I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. Lord,
Lord! how subject we old men are to this 328 vice of lying. This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth and the feats he hath done about Turnbull Street; and every third word a lie, duer 332 paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's Inn like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when a' was naked he was for all the world like a forked 336 radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife: a' was so forlorn that his dimensions to any thick sight were invisible: a' was the very genius of famine; yet lecherous as a 340 monkey, and the whores called him mandrake:
a' came ever in the rearward of the fashion and sung those tunes to the over-scutched huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware 344 they were his fancies or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John a Gaunt as if he had never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it and told John a Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have thrust 352 him and all his apparel into an eel-skin; the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court; and now has he land and beefs. Well,

 I'll be acquainted with him, if I return; and 356
 it shall go hard but I'll make him a philosopher's two stones to me. If the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time 360 shape, and there an end. Exit.

ACT FOURTH

Scene One

Enter the Archbishop, Mowbray, [Lord] Bardolph, Hastings, within the Forest of Gaultree.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree Forest, an't shall please your Grace.

Arch. Here stand, my lords, and send discoverers forth,

To know the numbers of our enemies. 4

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done.

My friends and brethren in these great affairs,
 I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd
 New-dated letters from Northumberland; 8

354 hautboy: slender reed instrument, oboe

357 philosopher's two stones; cf. n.

Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus:
Here doth he wish his person, with such powers
As might hold sortance with his quality;
The which he could not levy; whereupon 12
He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes,
To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers
That your attempts may overlive the hazard
And fearful meeting of their opposite. 16

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground
And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now, what news?

Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly form comes on the enemy; 20
And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number Upon or near the rate of thirty thousand.

Mowb. The just proportion that we gave them out.
Let us sway on and face them in the field. 24

Enter Westmoreland.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here?

Mowb. I think it is my Lord of Westmoreland.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general,
The Prince, Lord John and Duke of Lancaster. 28

Arch. Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland, in peace,
What doth concern your coming.

West. Then, my lord,
Unto your Grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. If that rebellion 32
Came like itself, in base and abject routs,

11 hold sortance: be in accord
20 form: formation
23 just proportion: exact size
33 routs: gangs

quality: rank

gave them out: described them

Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,
 And countenanc'd by boys and beggary;
 I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd, 36
 In his true, native, and most proper shape,
 You, reverend father, and these noble lords
 Had not been here, to dress the ugly form
 Of base and bloody insurrection 40
 With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop,
 Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd,
 Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd,
 Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd, 44
 Whose white investments figure innocence,
 The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,
 Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself
 Out of the speech of peace that bears such grace 48
 Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war;
 Turning your books to greaves, your ink to blood,
 Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine
 To a loud trumpet and a point of war? 52
Arch. Wherefore do I this? so the question stands.
 Briefly to this end: we are all diseas'd;
 And, with our surfeiting and wanton hours
 Have brought ourselves into a burning fever, 56
 And we must bleed for it: of which disease
 Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.
 But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland,
 I take not on me here as a physician, 60
 Nor do I as an enemy to peace
 Troop in the throngs of military men;
 But rather show a while like fearful war,
 To diet rank minds sick of happiness 64
 And purge the obstructions which begin to stop
 Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly:

I have in equal balance justly weigh'd
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer, 68

And find our griefs heavier than our offences.
We see which way the stream of time doth run
And are enforc'd from our most quiet sphere
By the rough torrent of occasion; 72

And have the summary of all our griefs,
When time shall serve, to show in articles,
Which long ere this we offer'd to the king,
And might by no suit gain our audience. 76

When we are wrong'd and would unfold our griefs,
We are denied access unto his person
Even by those men that most have done us wrong.

The dangers of the days but newly gone,— 80

Whose memory is written on the earth
With yet appearing blood,—and the examples

Of every minute's instance, present now,

Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms; 84

Not to break peace, or any branch of it,

But to establish here a peace indeed,

Concurring both in name and quality.

West. When ever yet was your appeal denied? 88

Wherein have you been galled by the king?

What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you,

That you should seal this lawless bloody book

Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine, 92

And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?

Arch. My brother general, the commonwealth,

To brother born an household cruelty,

I make my quarrel in particular. 96

West. There is no need of any such redress;

Or if there were, it not belongs to you.

Mowb. Why not to him in part, and to us all
 That feel the bruises of the days before, 100
 And suffer the condition of these times
 To lay a heavy and unequal hand
 Upon our honours?

West. O! my good Lord Mowbray,
 Construe the times to their necessities, 104
 And you shall say indeed, it is the time,
 And not the king, that doth you injuries.
 Yet, for your part, it not appears to me
 Either from the king or in the present time 108
 That you should have an inch of any ground
 To build a grief on: were you not restor'd
 To all the Duke of Norfolk's signories,
 Your noble and right well-remember'd father's? 112

Mowb. What thing, in honour, had my father lost,
 That need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me?
 The king that lov'd him as the state stood then,
 Was force perforce compell'd to banish him: 116
 And then that Harry Bolingbroke and he,
 Being mounted and both roused in their seats,
 Their neighing coursers daring of the spur,
 Their armed staves in charge, their beavers down, 120
 Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel,
 And the loud trumpet blowing them together,
 Then, then when there was nothing could have stay'd
 My father from the breast of Bolingbroke, 124
 O! when the king did throw his warder down,
 His own life hung upon the staff he threw;
 Then threw he down himself and all their lives
 That by indictment and by dint of sword 128

104 to: according to 114 breath'd: given breath of life

117 ff. Cf. n.

120 armed staves: lances

in charge: in rest for the charge

beavers: movable fronts of the helmets

121 sights: eyeholes of the helmet

125 warder: staff of command

Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.

West. You speak, Lord Mowbray, now you know not what.

The Earl of Hereford was reputed then
In England the most valiant gentleman: 132
Who knows on whom Fortune would then have smil'd?

But if your father had been victor there,
He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry;
For all the country in a general voice 136
Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers and love
Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on
And bless'd and grac'd indeed, more than the king.
But this is mere digression from my purpose. 140
Here come I from our princely general
To know your griefs; to tell you from his Grace
That he will give you audience; and wherein
It shall appear that your demands are just, 144
You shall enjoy them; everything set off
That might so much as think you enemies.

Mowb. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer,
And it proceeds from policy, not love. 148

West. Mowbray, you overween to take it so.
This offer comes from mercy, not from fear:
For, lo! within a ken our army lies
Upon mine honour, all too confident 152
To give admittance to a thought of fear.
Our battle is more full of names than yours,
Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
Our armour all as strong, our cause the best; 156
Then reason will our hearts should be as good:

129 miscarried: perished

131 Earl of Hereford: King Henry, actually Duke of Hereford at the time of his banishment (cf. Richard II, I. iii. 21)

145 set off: ignored

149 overween: are arrogant

151 within a ken: within seeing distance

154 names: noble and soldierly names

Say you not then our offer is compell'd.

Mowb. Well, by my will we shall admit no parley.

West. That argues but the shame of your offence: 160

A rotten case abides no handling.

Hast. Hath the Prince John a full commission,

In very ample virtue of his father,

To hear and absolutely to determine 164

Of what conditions we shall stand upon?

West. That is intended in the general's name.

I muse you make so slight a question.

Arch. Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland, this schedule, 168

For this contains our general grievances:

Each several article herein redress'd;

All members of our cause, both here and hence,

That are insinew'd to this action, 172

Acquitted by a true substantial form;

And present execution of our wills

To us and to our purposes consign'd;

We come within our awful banks again 176

And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords,

In sight of both our battles we may meet;

And either end in peace, which God so frame! 180

Or to the place of difference call the swords

Which must decide it.

Arch. My lord, we will do so.

Exit Westmoreland.

Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me

That no conditions of our peace can stand. 184

163 In . . . virtue: by complete authority

167 muse: wonder slight: trivial

172 insinew'd: joined as by sinews

176 awful: respectful, reverential

166 intended: implied

175 consign'd; cf. n.

Hast. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace

Upon such large terms, and so absolute
As our conditions shall consist upon,
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains. 188

Mowb. Yea, but our valuation shall be such
That every slight and false-derived cause,
Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason
Shall to the king taste of this action; 192
That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff
And good from bad find no partition. 196

Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this; the king is weary

Of dainty and such picking grievances:
For he hath found to end one doubt by death
Revives two greater in the heirs of life; 200
And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,
And keep no tell-tale to his memory
That may repeat and history his loss
To new remembrance; for full well he knows 204
He cannot so precisely weed this land
As his misdoubts present occasion:
His foes are so enrooted with his friends
That, plucking to unfix an enemy, 208
He doth unfasten so and shake a friend.
So that this land, like an offensive wife,
That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up 212
And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution.

189 our valuation: the king's estimation of us 191 nice: trivial
198 picking: fastidious 206 misdoubts: suspicions 213 hangs: suspends resolv'd correction: chastisement which had been determined upon

Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods
 On late offenders, that he now doth lack 216
 The very instruments of chastisement;
 So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
 May offer, but not hold.

Arch. 'Tis very true:
 And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal, 220
 If we do now make our atonement well,
 Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
 Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowb. Be it so.
 Here is return'd my Lord of Westmoreland. 224

Enter Westmoreland.

West. The prince is here at hand: pleaseth your lordship,
 To meet his Grace just distance 'tween our armies?
Mowb. Your Grace of York, in God's name then, set forward.
Arch. Before, and greet his Grace: my lord, we come. 228

Scene Two

[The Same]

Enter Prince John of Lancaster and his army.

Lanc. You are well encounter'd here, my cousin Mowbray:
 Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop;
 And so to you, Lord Hastings, and to all.
 My Lord of York, it better show'd with you. 4
 When that your flock, assembled by the bell,

219 offer: attack
 228 Before: go before me

221 atonement: reconciliation
 Scene Two; cf. n.

Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text
Than now to see you here an iron man, 8
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword and life to death.
That man that sits within a monarch's heart
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour, 12
Would he abuse the countenance of the king,
Alack! what mischiefs might he set abroad
In shadow of such greatness. With you, lord bishop,
It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken 16
How deep you were within the books of God?
To us the speaker in his parliament;
To us the imagin'd voice of God himself;
The very opener and intelligencer 20
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
And our dull workings. O! who shall believe
But you misuse the reverence of your place,
Employ the countenance and grace of heaven, 24
As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable? You have taken up,
Under the counterfeited zeal of God,
The subjects of his substitute, my father; 28
And both against the peace of heaven and him
Have here upswarm'd them.

Arch. Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace;
But, as I told my Lord of Westmoreland, 32
The time misorder'd doth, in common sense,
Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous form,
To hold our safety up. I sent your Grace
The parcels and particulars of our grief,— 36

20 intelligencer: interpreter
26 taken up: levied

22 workings: actions

The which hath been with scorn shov'd from the court,—

Whereon this Hydra son of war is born;
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep
With grant of our most just and right desires, 40
And true obedience, of this madness cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down, 44
We have supplies to second our attempt:
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them;
And so success of mischief shall be born,
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up 48
Whiles England shall have generation.

Lanc. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow,
To sound the bottom of the after-times.

West. Pleaseth your Grace, to answer them directly 52
How far forth you do like their articles.

Lanc. I like them all, and do allow them well;
And swear here, by the honour of my blood,
My father's purposes have been mistook, 56
And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning and authority.
My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd;
Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please you, 60
Discharge your powers unto their several counties,
As we will ours: and here between the armies
Let's drink together friendly and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those tokens home 64
Of our restored love and amity.

Arch. I take your princely word for these redresses.

Lanc. I give it you, and will maintain my word:
And thereupon I drink unto your Grace. 68

Hast. [To an Officer.] Go, captain, and deliver to the army

This news of peace: let them have pay, and part:
I know it will well please them: hie thee, captain.

Exit [Officer].

Arch. To you, my noble Lord of Westmoreland. 72

West. I pledge your Grace: and, if you knew what pains

I have bestow'd to breed this present peace,
You would drink freely; but my love to you Shall show itself more openly hereafter. 76

Arch. I do not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it.

Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowbray.

Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season;
For I am, on the sudden, something ill. 80

Arch. Against ill chances men are ever merry,
But heaviness foreruns the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow

Serves to say thus, Some good thing comes to-morrow. 84

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.

Mowb. So much the worse if your own rule be true.

Shout [within].

Lanc. The word of peace is render'd: hark, how they shout!

Mowb. This had been cheerful, after victory. 88

70 part: depart

82 heaviness: depression

87 render'd: reported

81 Against: when about to face

85 passing: exceedingly

Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest;
For then both parties nobly are subdu'd,
And neither party loser.

Lanc. Go, my lord,
And let our army be discharged too. 92

Exit [Westmoreland].

And, good my lord, so please you, let our trains
March by us, that we may peruse the men
We should have cop'd withal.

Arch. Go, good Lord Hastings, 96
And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by.

Exit [Hastings].

Lanc. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night together.

Enter Westmoreland.

Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still?

West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand, 100

Will not go off until they hear you speak.

Lanc. They know their duties.

Enter Hastings.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already:
Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses 104

East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke up,
Each hurries toward his home and sporting-place.

West. Good tidings, my Lord Hastings; for the which

I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason: 108
And you, lord archbishop, and you, Lord Mowbray,
Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable?

West. Is your assembly so? 112

Arch. Will you thus break your faith?

Lanc.

I pawn'd thee none.

I promis'd you redress of these same grievances
Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honour,
I will perform with a most Christian care. 116

But for you, rebels, look to taste the due

Meet for rebellion and such acts as yours.

Most shallowly did you these arms commence,
Fondly brought here and foolishly sent hence. 120

Strike up our drums! pursue the scatter'd stray:

God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.

Some guard these traitors to the block of death;
Treason's true bed, and yielder up of breath. 124

Exeunt.

Scene Three

[Another Part of the Forest]

Alarums. Excursions. Enter Falstaff and Colevile.

Fal. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Colevile of the dale. 4

Fal. Well then, Colevile is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the dale: Colevile shall be still your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place, a place 8 deep enough; so shall you be still Colevile of the dale.

Cole. Are not you Sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whoe'er I am. 12
Do ye yield, sir, or shall I sweat for you? If 113 pawn'd: pledged

120 Fondly: foolishly

I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death: therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to <sup>16</sup> my mercy.

Cole. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this <sup>20</sup> belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: my womb, my <sup>24</sup> womb, my womb undoes me. Here comes our general.

Enter Prince John, Westmoreland and the rest.

Lanc. The heat is past, follow no further now.
Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland. <sup>28</sup>

[Exit Westmoreland.]

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?

When everything is ended, then you come:

These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life,

One time or other break some gallows' back. <sup>32</sup>

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my <sup>36</sup> poor and old motion, the expedition of thought?
I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility; I have foundered nine score and odd posts; and here, travel-tainted as I am, <sup>40</sup> have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Coleville of the dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say 44 with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, 'I came, saw, and overcame.'

Lanc. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving. 48

Fal. I know not: here he is, and here I yield him; and I beseech your Grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with 52 mine own picture on the top on't, Colevile kissing my foot. To the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pences to me, and I in the clear sky of fame 56 o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble. Therefore let me have right, and let desert 60 mount.

Lanc. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine then.

Lanc. Thine's too thick to shine. 64

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

Lanc. Is thy name Colevile?

Cole. It is, my lord. 68

Lanc. A famous rebel art thou, Colevile.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him.

Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are That led me hither: had they been rul'd by me 72 You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I know not how they sold themselves:

but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis, and I thank thee for thee. 76

Enter Westmoreland.

Lanc. Now, have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made and execution stay'd.

Lanc. Send Colevile with his confederates
To York, to present execution. 80
Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure.

Exit [Blunt] with Colevile.

And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords:
I hear, the king my father is sore sick:
Our news shall go before us to his majesty, 84
Which, cousin [addressing Westmoreland], you shall bear, to comfort him;
And we with sober speed will follow you.

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go, Through Gloucestershire, and when you come to court 88

Stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

Lanc. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my condition,
Shall better speak of you than you deserve.

[Exeunt all but Falstaff.]

Fal. I would you had but the wit: 'twere 92 better than your dukedom. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh; but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's 96 never none of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, 100 when they marry, they get wenches. They are generally fools and cowards, which some of us should be too but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. 104

 It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish and dull and crudy vapours which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forget-ive, full of nimble, fiery and delectable shapes; 108 which, deliver'd o'er to the voice, the tongue, which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sberris is, the warming of the blood; which, before cold and 112 settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice: but the sherris warms it and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme. It illumineth 116 the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm;
 and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits muster me all to their captain, the heart, 120 who, great and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work; and learn- 124 ing, a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil till sack commences it and sets it in act and use.
 Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valiant;
 for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of 128 his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and tilled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very 132 hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potations and to addict themselves to sack. 136

Enter Bardolph.

How now, Bardolph?

Bard. The army is discharged all and gone.

Fal. Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire; and there will I visit Master Robert 140 Shallow, esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. Exeunt.

Scene Four

[Westminster. The Jerusalem Chamber]

Enter the King, Warwick, Thomas Duke of Clarence, Humphrey of Gloucester [and others].

King. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end
To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields
And draw no swords, but what are sanctified. 4
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And everything lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength; 8
And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government.

War. Both which we doubt not but your majesty Shall soon enjoy.

King. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester, 12

Scene Four S. d. Jerusalem Chamber; cf. n.

5 address'd: prepared

6 invested: invested with authority

Where is the prince your brother?

Glo. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

King. And how accompanied?

Glo. I do not know, my lord.

King. Is not his brother Thomas of Clarence with him? 16

Glo. No, my good lord; he is in presence here.

Cla. What would my lord and father?

King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother? 20

He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas;

Thou hast a better place in his affection

Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy,

And noble offices thou mayst effect 24

Of mediation, after I am dead,

Between his greatness and thy other brethren:

Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love,

Nor lose the good advantage of his grace 28

By seeming cold or careless of his will;

For he is gracious, if he be observ'd:

He hath a tear for pity and a hand

Open as day for melting charity; 32

Yet, notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint;

As humorous as winter, and as sudden

As flaws congealed in the spring of day.

His temper therefore must be well observ'd: 36

Chide him for faults, and do it reverently,

When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth;

But, being moody, give him line and scope,

Till that his passions, like a whale on ground, 40

Confound themselves with working. Learn this,

Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,

A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in,

That the united vessel of their blood, 44

Mingled with venom of suggestion—

As, force perforce, the age will pour it in—

Shall never leak, though it do work as strong

As aconitum or rash gunpowder. 48

Cla. I shall observe him with all care and love.

King. Why art thou not at Windsor with him,
Thomas?

Cla. He is not there to-day; he dines in London.

King. And how accompanied? canst thou tell that? 52

Cla. With Poins and other his continual followers.

King. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;
And he, the noble image of my youth,
Is overspread with them: therefore my grief 56

Stretches itself beyond the hour of death:

The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape

In forms imaginary the unguided days

And rotten times that you shall look upon 60

When I am sleeping with my ancestors.

For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,

When rage and hot blood are his counsellors,

When means and lavish manners meet together, 64

O! with what wings shall his affections fly

Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay.

War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite:
The prince but studies his companions 68

Like a strange tongue, wherein, to gain the language,

'Tis needful that the most immodest word

But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms,
The prince will in the perfectness of time
Cast off his followers; and their memory
Shall as a pattern or a measure live, 76
By which his Grace must mete the lives of others,
Turning past evils to advantages.

King. 'Tis seldom when the bee doth leave her comb
In the dead carrion.

Enter Westmoreland.

Who's here? Westmoreland! 80
West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness Added to that that I am to deliver!
Prince John your son doth kiss your Grace's hand:
Mowbray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings and all 84
Are brought to the correction of your law.
There is not now a rebel's sword unsheath'd,
But Peace puts forth her olive everywhere.
The manner how this action hath been borne 88
Here at more leisure may your highness read,
With every course in his particular.

King. O Westmoreland! thou art a summer bird,
Which ever in the haunch of winter sings 92
The lifting up of day.

Enter Harcourt.

Look! here's more news.
Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty;
And, when they stand against you, may they fall
As those that I am come to tell you of! 96

The Earl Northumberland, and the Lord Bardolph,
 With a great power of English and of Scots,
 Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown.
 The manner and true order of the fight 100
 This packet, please it you, contains at large.

King. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?

Will Fortune never come with both hands full
 But write her fair words still in foulest letters? 104
 She either gives a stomach and no food;
 Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast
 And takes away the stomach; such are the rich,
 That have abundance and enjoy it not. 108
 I should rejoice now at this happy news,
 And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy.
 O me! come near me, now I am much ill.

Glo. Comfort, your majesty!

Cla. O my royal father! 112

West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself: look up!

War. Be patient, princes: you do know these fits
 Are with his highness very ordinary:
 Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be well. 116

Cla. No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs:
 The incessant care and labour of his mind
 Hath wrought the mure that should confine it in
 So thin, that life looks through and will break out. 120

Glo. The people fear me; for they do observe Unfather'd heirs and loathly births of nature:
 The seasons change their manners, as the year

Cla. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between;
And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,
Say it did so a little time before

That our great-grandsire, Edward, sick'd and died. 128

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.

Glo. This apoplexy will certain be his end.

King. I pray you take me up, and bear me hence
Into some other chamber: softly, pray. 132

[Attendants and Lords take the King up, convey him into an inner room, and lay him upon a bed.]

Scene Five

[Another Chamber]

King Henry lying on a bed: Clarence, Gloucester, Warwick, and Others in attendance.]

King. Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;

Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room. 4

King. Set me the crown upon my pillow here.

Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter Prince Henry.

Prince. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?

Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness. 8

Prince. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!

2 dull: soothing, drowsy

How doth the king?

Glo. Exceeding ill.

Prince. Heard he the good news yet?

Tell it him.

Glo. He alter'd much upon the hearing it. 12

Prince. If he be sick with joy, he'll recover without physic.

War. Not so much noise, my lords. Sweet prince, speak low;

The king your father is dispos'd to sleep. 16

Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room.

War. Will 't please your Grace to go along with us?

Prince. No; I will sit and watch here by the king.

[Exeunt all but the Prince.]

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow, 20

Being so troublesome a bedfellow?

O polish'd perturbation! golden care!

That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide

To many a watchful night! Sleep with it now! 24

Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet

As he whose brow with homely biggin bound

Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!

When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit 28

Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,

That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath

There lies a downy feather which stirs not:

Did he suspire, that light and weightless down 32

Perforce must move. My gracious lord! my father!

This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep

That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd

So many English kings. Thy due from me 36

Which nature, love, and filial tenderness

My due from thee is this imperial crown, 40
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me, Lo! here it sits,

[Putting it on his head.]

Which God shall guard; and put the world's whole strength

Into one giant arm, it shall not force 44

This lineal honour from me. This from thee

Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. Exit.

King. [Waking.] Warwick! Gloucester! Clarence!

Enter Warwick, Gloucester, Clarence [and the rest].

Cla. Doth the king call?

War. What would your majesty? How fares your Grace? 48

King. Why did you leave me here alone, my lords?

Cla. We left the prince my brother here, my liege,
Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

King. The Prince of Wales! Where is he? let me see him: 52

He is not here.

War. This door is open; he is gone this way.

Glo. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.

King. Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow? 56

War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.

King. The prince hath ta'en it hence: go, seek him out.

Is he so hasty that he doth suppose

My sleep my death?

60

Find him, my Lord of Warwick; chide him hither.

[Exit Warwick.]

This part of his conjoins with my disease,
And helps to end me. See, sons, what things you are!
How quickly nature falls into revolt
When gold becomes her object!

64

For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleep with thoughts,
Their brains with care, their bones with industry; 68
For this they have engrossed and pil'd up
The canker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold;
For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their sons with arts and martial exercises: 72
When, like the bee, culling from every flower
The virtuous sweets,
Our thighs packed with wax, our mouths with honey,
We bring it to the hive, and like the bees, 76
Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste Yield his engrossments to the ending father.

Enter Warwick.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me? 80

War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room,

Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks,
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow
That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood, 84
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

King. But wherefore did he take away the crown?

62 part: act

74 virtuous: beneficial

82 kindly: natural

69 engrossed: amassed

Enter Prince Henry.

Lo, where he comes. Come hither to me, Harry. 88
Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.

Exeunt [Warwick, and the rest].

Prince. I never thought to hear you speak again.

King. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought:

I stay too long by thee, I weary thee. 92

Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair

That thou wilt needs invest thee with my honours

Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!

Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee. 96

Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity

Is held from falling with so weak a wind

That it will quickly drop: my day is dim.

Thou hast stol'n that which after some few hours 100

Were thine without offence; and at my death

Thou hast seal'd up my expectation:

Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not,

And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it. 104

Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts,

Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,

To stab at half an hour of my life.

What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour? 108

Then get thee gone and dig my grave thyself,

And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear

That thou art crowned, not that I am dead.

Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse 112

Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head:

Only compound me with forgotten dust;

Give that which gave thee life unto the worms.

Pluck down my officers, break my decrees; 116

102 seal'd up: confirmed fully

For now a time is come to mock at form.
 Harry the Fifth is crown'd! Up, vanity!
 Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors, hence!
 And to the English court assemble now, 120
 From every region, apes of idleness!
 Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum:
 Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance,
 Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit 124
 The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?
 Be happy, he will trouble you no more:
 England shall double gild his treble guilt.
 England shall give him office, honour, might; 128
 For the fifth Harry from curb'd licence plucks
 The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog
 Shall flesh his tooth in every innocent.
 O my poor kingdom! sick with civil blows, 132
 When that my care could not withhold thy riots,
 What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
 O! thou wilt be a wilderness again,
 Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants. 136
Prince. O! pardon me, my liege; but for my tears,
 The moist impediments unto my speech,
 I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke
 Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard 140
 The course of it so far. There is your crown;
 And he that wears the crown immortally
 Long guard it yours! If I affect it more Than as your honour and as your renown, 144
 Let me no more from this obedience rise,—
 Which my most inward, true, and duteous spirit
 Teacheth,—this prostrate and exterior bending.
 God witness with me, when I here came in, 148
 And found no course of breath within your majesty,

117 form: order
 139 dear: earnest

118 vanity: folly

134 care: special study
 143 affect: aspire to

How cold it struck my heart! if I do feign,
O! let me in my present wildness die
And never live to show the incredulous world 152
The noble change that I have purposed.
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,
And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,
I spake unto the crown as having sense, 156
And thus upbraided it: 'The care on thee depending Hath fed upon the body of my father;
Therefore, thou best of gold art worst of gold:
Other, less fine in carat, is more precious, 160
Preserving life in medicine potable:
But thou most fine, most honour'd, most renown'd,
Hast eat thy bearer up.' Thus, my most royal liege,
Accusing it, I put it on my head, 164
To try with it, as with an enemy
That had before my face murder'd my father,
The quarrel of a true inheritor.
But if it did infect my blood with joy, 168
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did with the least affection of a welcome
Give entertainment to the might of it, 172
Let God for ever keep it from my head,
And make me as the poorest vassal is
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!

King. O my son! 176
God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou mightst win the more thy father's love,
Pleading so wisely in excuse of it.
Come hither, Harry: sit thou by my bed; 180
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son,

By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways
 I met this crown; and I myself know well 184
 How troublesome it sat upon my head:
 To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
 Better opinion, better confirmation;
 For all the soil of the achievement goes 188
 With me into the earth. It seem'd in me
 But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand,
 And I had many living to upbraid
 My gain of it by their assistances; 192
 Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed,
 Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears
 Thou seest with peril I have answered;
 For all my reign hath been but as a scene 196
 Acting that argument; and now my death
 Changes the mode: for what in me was purchas'd,
 Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
 So thou the garment wear'st successively. 200
 Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,
 Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green;
 And all my friends, which thou must make thy
     friends,
 Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out; 204
 By whose fell working I was first advanc'd,
 And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
 To be again displac'd: which to avoid,
 I cut them off; and had a purpose now 208
 To lead out many to the Holy Land,
 Lest rest and lying still might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
 Be it thy course to busy giddy minds 212
 With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne out,

188 soil: *pollution*197 argument: *story*198 mode; cf. n.      purchas'd: *acquired by my own act, not inherited*200 successively: *by right of succession*213 hence: in other lands

May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so
That strength of speech is utterly denied me. 216
How I came by the crown, O God, forgive!
And grant it may with thee in true peace live.

Prince. My gracious liege,
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me; 220
Then plain and right must my possession be:
Which I with more than with a common pain
'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter Lord John of Lancaster, and Warwick.

King. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster. 224

Lanc. Health, peace, and happiness to my royal father!

King. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son
John;

But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
From this bare wither'd trunk: upon thy sight 228
My worldly business makes a period.
Where is my Lord of Warwick?

Prince. My Lord of Warwick!

[Warwick comes forward.]

King. Doth any name particular belong
Unto the lodging where I first did swoond? 232

War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.

King. Laud be to God! even there my life must end.

It hath been prophesied to me many years
I should not die but in Jerusalem, 236
Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land.
But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie:
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. Exeunt.

ACT FIFTH

Scene One

[Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire]

Enter Shallow, Falstaff, Bardolph [and Bardolph's boy].

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night. What! Davy, I say.

Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow. 4

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused. Why, Davy! 8

Enter Davy.

Davy. Here, sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see, Davy; let me see: yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither. Sir John, you shall not be excused. 12

Davy. Marry, sir, thus; those precepts cannot be served: and again, sir, shall we sow the headland with wheat? 16

Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook: are there no young pigeons?

Davy. Yes, sir. Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons. 20

Shal. Let it be cast and paid. Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had: and, sir, do you mean to 24 stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?

Shal. A' shall answer it. Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of 28 mutton, and any petty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night,
sir? 32

Shal. Yea, Davy. I will use him well. A friend i' the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy, for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite. 36

Davy. No worse than they are back-bitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy: about thy business, Davy. 40

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance
William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes
o' the hill.

Shal. There is many complaints, Davy, 44 against that Visor: that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave 48 should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if 52
I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is 29 kickshaws: fancy dishes

mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your 56 worship, let him be countenanced.

Shal. Go to; I say he shall have no wrong.
Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy.] Where are you,
Sir John? Come, come, come; off with your 60 boots. Give me your hand, Master Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.

Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph:—[To the Page.] and wel- 64 come, my tall fellow. Come, Sir John.

Fal. I'll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. [Exit Shallow.] Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.] If I 68 were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's staves as Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: 72 they, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man. Their spirits are so married in conjunction with the 76 participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese. If I had a suit to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master: 80 if to his men, I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants.
It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of 84 another: therefore let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions,—which 88 is four terms, or two actions,—and a' shall laugh without intervallums. O! it is much that a lie with a slight oath and a jest with a sad brow will do with a fellow that never had the ache in 92 his shoulders. O! you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up!

Shal. [Within.] Sir John!

Fal. I come, Master Shallow: I come, Master 96 Shallow. [Exit.]

Scene Two

[Westminster. The Palace]

Enter the Earl of Warwick and the Lord Chief Justice.

War. How now, my Lord Chief Justice! whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the king?

War. Exceeding well: his cares are now all ended.

Ch. Just. I hope not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature; 4
And to our purposes he lives no more.

Ch. Just. I would his majesty had call'd me with him:

The service that I truly did his life
Hath left me open to all injuries. 8

War. Indeed I think the young king loves you not.

Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do arm myself
To welcome the condition of the time,
Which cannot look more hideously upon me 12

89 terms: i.e., of court

actions: legal actions for debt

90 intervallums: intervals

91 sad: sober

94 ill laid up: carelessly put away

Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter John of Lancaster, Gloucester, Clarence [Westmoreland, and others].

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry:
O! that the living Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen. 16
How many nobles then should hold their places,
That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort!

Ch. Just. O God! I fear all will be overturn'd.

Lanc. Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good morrow. 20

Glo. } Good morrow, cousin.
Cla. }

Lanc. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument
Is all too heavy to admit much talk. 24

Lanc. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

Glo. O! good my lord, you have lost a friend
indeed;

And I dare swear you borrow not that face 28
Of seeming sorrow; it is sure your own.

Lanc. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find,

You stand in coldest expectation.

I am the sorrier; would 'twere otherwise. 32

Cla. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair,

Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour,

14 heavy: sorrowful
31 coldest: most hopeless

23 argument: subject of conversation
34 Cf. n.

Led by the impartial conduct of my soul; 36
And never shall you see that I will beg
A ragged and forestall'd remission.

If truth and upright innocency fail me,
I'll to the king my master that is dead, 40
And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter the Prince and Blunt.

Ch. Just. Good morrow, and God save your majesty!

Prince. This new and gorgeous garment, majesty, 44

Sits not so easy on me as you think.

Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear:
This is the English, not the Turkish court;
Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds, 48

But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,
For, by my faith, it very well becomes you:
Sorrow so royally in you appears
That I will deeply put the fashion on 52

And wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad;
But entertain no more of it, good brothers,
Than a joint burden laid upon us all.

For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd, 56
I'll be your father and your brother too;

Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares:
Yet weep that Harry's dead, and so will I;
But Harry lives that shall convert those tears 60

By number into hours of happiness.

Brothers. We hope no other from your majesty.

Prince. You all look strangely on me: [To the Chief Justice.] and you most;

33 ragged: beggarly

forestall'd remission: pardon that is sure not to be granted

48 Cf. n.

You are, I think, assur'd I love you not. 64

Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly,
Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

Prince. No?

How might a prince of my great hopes forget 68
So great indignities you laid upon me?

What! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison
The immediate heir of England! Was this easy?
May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten? 72

Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your father;

The image of his power lay then in me:
And, in the administration of his law,
Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth, 76

Your highness pleased to forget my place,
The majesty and power of law and justice,
The image of the king whom I presented,
And struck me in my very seat of judgment; 80

Whereon, as an offender to your father,
I gave bold way to my authority,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the garland, 84

To have a son set your decrees at nought,
To pluck down justice from your awful bench,
To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword
That guards the peace and safety of your person: 88

Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image
And mock your workings in a second body.

Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours;
Be now the father and propose a son, 92

Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,
See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,

71 easy: trivial

72 Lethe: the river of oblivion

73 use the person: make use of my position as personal representative

79 presented: represented

84 garland: crown

90 second body: deputy

92 propose: imagine

Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd;
 And then imagine me taking your part, 98
 And in your power soft silencing your son:
 After this cold considerance, sentence me;
 And, as you are a king, speak in your state
 What I have done that misbecame my place, 100
 My person, or my liege's sovereignty.

Prince. You are right, justice; and you weigh this well;

Therefore still bear the balance and the sword:
 And I do wish your honours may increase 104
 Till you do live to see a son of mine
 Offend you and obey you, as I did.
 So shall I live to speak my father's words:
 'Happy am I, that have a man so bold 108
 That dares do justice on my proper son;
 And not less happy, having such a son,
 That would deliver up his greatness so
 Into the hands of justice.' You did commit me: 112
 For which, I do commit into your hand
 The unstained sword that you have us'd to bear;
 With this remembrance, that you use the same
 With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit 116
 As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand:
 You shall be as a father to my youth;
 My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear,
 And I will stoop and humble my intents 120
 To your well-practis'd wise directions.
 And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you;
 My father is gone wild into his grave,
 For in his tomb lie my affections; 124
 And with his spirit sadly I survive,

98 considerance: consideration

103 balance and the sword: emblems of Justice

109 proper: own

115 remembrance: admonition

123, 124 Cf. n.

125 sadly: soberly

To mock the expectation of the world,
 To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
 Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down 128
 After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
 Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now:
 Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea,
 Where it shall mingle with the state of floods 132
 And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
 Now call we our high court of parliament;
 And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
 That the great body of our state may go 136
 In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;
 That war or peace, or both at once, may be
 As things acquainted and familiar to us;
 In which you, father, shall have foremost hand. 140
 Our coronation done, we will accite,
 As I before remember'd, all our state:
 And, God consigning to my good intents,
 No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say, 144
 God shorten Harry's happy life one day. Exeunt.

Scene Three

[The Garden of Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire]

Enter Sir John, Shallow, Silence, Davy, Bardolph, Page.

Shal. Nay, you shall see my orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of so forth; come, cousin Silence; and then to bed. 4

Fal. 'Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, Sir John: marry, good air. Spread, 8
Davy; spread: well said, Davy.

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man and your husband.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very 12 good varlet, Sir John: by the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper: a good varlet.
Now sit down, now sit down. Come, cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah! quoth a', we shall 16

'Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer,
And praise God for the merry year;
When flesh is cheap and females dear,
And lusty lads roam here and there, 20
So merrily.

And ever among so merrily.'

Fal. There's a merry heart! Good Master
Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon. 24

Shal. Give Master Bardolph some wine, Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sit; I'll be with you anon:
most sweet sir, sit. Master page, good master page, sit. Proface! What you want in meat 28 we'll have in drink: but you must bear: the heart's all. [Exit.]

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolph; and my little soldier there, be merry. 32

3 grafting: grafting caraways: confection made with caraway seeds

Sil. 'Be merry, be merry, my wife has all;
 For women are shrews, both short and tall:
 'Tis merry in hall when beards wag all,
 And welcome merry Shrove-tide. 36
 Be merry, be merry.'

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who, I? I have been merry twice and 40 once ere now.

[Enter Davy.]

Davy. There's a dish of leather-coats for you.
 [Setting them before Bardolph.]

Shal. Davy!

Davy. Your worship! I'll be with you straight. 44
 A cup of wine, sir?

Sil. 'A cup of wine that's brisk and fine
 And drink unto the leman mine;
 And a merry heart lives long-a.' 48

Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. And we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet o' the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, Master 52
 Silence.

Sil. 'Fill the cup, and let it come;
 I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.'

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: if thou want- 56
 est anything and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart.
 [To the Page.] Welcome, my little tiny thief;
 and welcome indeed too. I'll drink to Master Bardolph and to all the cavaleros about London. 60

36 Shrove-tide: a time of special merriment at the close of the carnival

42 leather-coats: russet apples

47 leman: sweetheart

60 cavaleros: cavaliers

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,—

Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together: ha! will you not, Master Bardolph? 64

Bard. Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot.

Shal. By God's liggens, I thank thee. The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that: a' will not out; he is true bred. 68

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing: be merry. [One knocks at the door.]

Look who's at door there. Ho! who knocks? 72

[Exit Davy.]

Fal. [To Silence, who drinks a bumper.] Why, now you have done me right.

Sil. 'Do me right,
And dub me knight: 76
Samingo.'

Is 't not so?

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is 't so? Why, then, say an old man can 80 do somewhat.

[Enter Davy.]

Davy. An 't please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court! let him come in. 84

Enter Pistol.

How now, Pistol!

Pist. Sir John, God save you, sir!

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good. 88

Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm.

Sil. By 'r lady, I think a' be, but goodman Puff of Barson. 92

Pist. Puff!

Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base!

Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend,
And helter-skelter have I rode to thee, 96

And tidings do I bring and lucky joys
And golden times and happy news of price.

Fal. I prithee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A foutra for the world and worldlings base! 100

I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news?
Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Sil. 'And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John.' 104

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons?
And shall good news be baffled?

Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.

Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding. 108

Pist. Why then, lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir: if, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there's but two ways: either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am sir, under the king, in some authority. 112

91 but: except

die. 116

Shal. Under King Harry.

Pist. Harry the Fourth? or Fifth?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

Pist. A foutra for thine office!

Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king;
Harry the Fifth's the man. I speak the truth: 120
When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like
The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What! is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in door: the things I speak are just. 124

Fal. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse.
Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double charge thee with dignities. 128

Bard. O joyful day!

I would not take a knighthood for my fortune.

Pist. What! I do bring good news.

Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed. Master 132 Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am Fortune's steward. Get on thy boots: we'll ride all night. O sweet Pistol! Away, Bardolph!
[Exit Bardolph.] Come, Pistol, utter more to 136 me; and withal devise something to do thyself good. Boot, boot, Master Shallow: I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses; the laws of England are at my 140 commandment. Blessed are they which have been my friends, and woe to my lord chief justice!

115 Bezonian: base beggar

121 fig: to thrust the thumb between two closed fingers, or into the mouth, a vulgar insult, imported from Spain

124 just: correct

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also! 144
 'Where is the life that late I led?' say they:
 Why, here it is: welcome these pleasant days!

Exeunt.

Scene Four

[London. A Street]

Enter Hostess Quickly, Doll Tearsheet, and Beadles.

Host. No, thou arrant knave: I would to God that I might die that I might have thee hanged;
 thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

First Bead. The constables have delivered 4 her over to me, and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her: there hath been a man or two lately killed about her.

Dol. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on; 8
 I'll tell thee what, thou damned tripe-visaged rascal, an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou wert better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain. 12

Host. O the Lord! that Sir John were come;
 he would make this a bloody day to somebody.
 But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!

First Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen 16 of cushions again; you have but eleven now.
 Come, I charge you both go with me; for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat amongst you.

Dol. I'll tell you what, you thin man in a 20 censer, I will have you as soundly swung for 145 Quotation from another ballad

8 nut-hook: slang for beadle; cf. catchpole

20, 21 in a censer: i.e., a figure embossed on a censer

21 swung: whipped

this, you blue-bottle rogue! you filthy famished correctioner! if you be not swung, I'll forswear half-kirtles. 24

First Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.

Host. O God, that right should thus overcome might! Well, of sufferance comes ease.

Dol. Come, you rogue, come: bring me to 28 a justice.

Host. Ay; come, you starved blood-hound.

Dol. Goodman death! goodman bones!

Host. Thou atomy, thou! 32

Dol. Come, you thin thing; come, you rascal!

First Bead. Very well. Exeunt.

Scene Five

[A public Place near Westminster Abbey]

Enter two Grooms, strewers of rushes.

First Groom. More rushes, more rushes.

Sec. Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.

First Groom. 'Twill be two o'clock ere they 4 come from the coronation. Dispatch, dispatch.

Exeunt Grooms.

Trumpets sound, and the King and his train pass over the stage. After them, enter Falstaff, Shallow, Pistol, Bardolph, and the Boy.

Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow; I will make the king do you grace. I will

22 blue-bottle: the reference is to the beadle's blue livery

24 half-kirtles: waists or skirts

27 of sufferance: out of suffering

32 atomy: Dame Quickly's confusion of 'atom' with 'anatomy' = skeleton leer upon him, as a' comes by; and do but mark 8

the countenance that he will give me.

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight.

Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me.
O! if I had had time to have made new liveries, 12
I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter; this poor show doth better: this doth infer the zeal I had to see him. 16

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion. 20

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me. 24

Shal. It is best, certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him; thinking of nothing else; putting all affairs else in oblivion, 28 as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis semper idem, for absque hoc nihil est:
'Tis all in every part. 32

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver,
And make thee rage.

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, 36
Is in base durance and contagious prison;
Hal'd thither

By most mechanical and dirty hand:

Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell Alecto's snake, 40

For Doll is in: Pistol speaks nought but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her.

[Shouts within and trumpets sound.]

Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangour sounds.

The trumpets sound. Enter King Henry the Fifth, Brothers, Lord Chief Justice.

Fal. God save thy grace, King Hal! my royal 44 Hal!

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy! 48

K. Hen. V. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what 'tis you speak?

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my heart!

K. Hen. V. I know thee not, old man: fall to thy prayers; 52

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!

I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,

So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane;

But, being awak'd, I do despise my dream. 56

Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace;

Leave gormandising; know the grave doth gape

For thee thrice wider than for other men.

Reply not to me with a fool-born jest: 60

Presume not that I am the thing I was;

For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,

That I have turn'd away my former self;
 So will I those that kept me company. 64
 When thou dost hear I am as I have been,
 Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,
 The tutor and the feeder of my riots:
 Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death, 68
 As I have done the rest of my misleaders,
 Not to come near our person by ten mile.
 For competence of life I will allow you,
 That lack of means enforce you not to evil: 72
 And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,
 We will, according to your strength and qualities,
 Give you advancement. Be it your charge, my lord,
 To see perform'd the tenour of our word. 76
 Set on. Exit the King [with his Train].

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Yea, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me. 80

Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this: I shall be sent for in private to him. Look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancements; I 84 will be the man yet that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot perceive how, unless you give me your doublet and stuff me out with straw.
 I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five 88 hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: this that you heard was but a colour.

Shal. A colour that I fear you will die in, Sir 92
 John.

Fal. Fear no colours: go with me to dinner.

92 colour: pun on collar, halter

94 Fear no colours: have no fear; originally, fear no enemy

Come, Lieutenant Pistol; come, Bardolph: I shall be sent for soon at night. 96

Enter Justice and Prince John.

Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet;
Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord!

EPILOGUE

[Spoken by a Dancer.]

First, my fear; then, my curtsy; last my speech. My fear is, your displeasure, my curtsy, my duty, and my speech, to beg your pardon. If you look for a good speech now, you 4 undo me; for what I have to say is of mine own making; and what indeed I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture. Be it known 8 to you,—as it is very well,—I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it and to promise you a better. I did mean indeed to pay you with this; which, 12 if like an ill venture it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here, I promised you I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some and I 16 will pay you some; and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet 20 that were but light payment, to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me: if the 24 gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly.

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not 28 too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for anything I know, Falstaff 32 shall die of a sweat, unless already a' be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you 36 good night: and so kneel down before you; but, indeed, to pray for the queen.

38 to pray for the queen; cf. n.

NOTES.

Ind. S. d. Rumour, painted full of tongues. Vergil (Æneid iv. 174) describes Fame, or Rumour, as covered with ears, eyes, and tongues. Cf. also Chaucer, House of Fame, 1389-90.

Ind. 24. Shrewsbury. The last act of Shakespeare's Henry IV, Part I, is devoted to the battle of Shrewsbury, in which the King and his armies overcome the rebel forces under young Harry Percy (Hotspur); his uncle, the Earl of Worcester; and the Scottish Earl of Douglas.

Ind. 29. Harry Monmouth. Henry, Prince of Wales, who, according to Shakespeare, killed Hotspur in single combat at the battle of Shrewsbury. Monmouth was the place of his birth.

Ind. 35. hole. Shakespeare is obviously playing on the words hole and hold. Most modern editors have spoiled the rather poor pun by substituting the word hold for hole.

I. i. 116-118. 'By his spirit was his party inspired, i.e., made keen and sharp as steel; but, when once his spirit was brought down (technically, reduced to a lower temper) all his followers became dull and heavy as lead.'

I. i. 128. In 1 Henry IV, V. iii., Douglas kills Sir Walter Blunt, who was dressed to resemble the King, and tells us that he has already killed the Lord of Stafford in the king's 'likeness.' When, later, Prince Hal challenges Douglas to single combat, he says:

'the spirits

Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms.'

I. i. 166-179. These lines are the first of a series of passages omitted in the Quarto texts of the play and added by the Folio. The other important Folio additions are the following: I. i. 189-209; I. iii. 21-24; I. iii. 36-55; I. iii. 85-108; II. iii. 23-45; IV. i. 55-79; Epilogue 37, 38 (and so kneel . . . queen). Furthermore, the whole of III. i., containing the King's famous soliloquy on sleep, is omitted in certain Quarto copies, though added in others. On the other hand, certain passages, usually shorter and belonging to the prose scenes, are omitted in the Folio version; viz., I. ii. 244-251 (But it was . . . motion); II. ii. 26-31 (and God . . . strengthened); II. iv. 14, 15 (Dispatch . . . straight); II. iv. 144-146; II. iv. 428 f. (Come! . . . come, Doll?); III. i. 53-56 (O! . . . die); III. ii. 340, 341 (yet lecherous . . . mandraké); III. ii. 342-345 (and sung . . . good-nights); IV. i. 93; IV. i. 95.

I. i. 204, 205. According to Shakespeare, King Richard II, predecessor and cousin of Henry IV, was murdered in Pomfret castle at Henry's hint, after the latter had forced Richard's abdication. Cf. Shakespeare's Richard II. Richard Scroop, Archbishop of York, belonged to a family which was firmly attached to the cause of Richard.

I. i. 208. Bolingbroke. King Henry, born in Bolingbroke castle, Lincolnshire.

I. ii. 18. manned with an agate. Attended by a servant as small as a figure cut in an agate.

I. ii. 25. face-royal. A royal was a gold coin worth ten shillings. Falstaff is here playing on the double sense of a 'royal face' and the face stamped on the coin.

I. ii. 38. glutton. The parable of Dives and Lazarus (St. Luke 16. 19-31) is frequently referred to by Falstaff, possibly because Dives, 'the glutton,' who 'fared sumptuously every day,' but who went to hell and called out for the poor man Lazarus to 'dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue,' reminds Falstaff of his own manner of life and probable fate.

I. ii. 39. Achitophel. The counsellor of Absalom (II Samuel 15-17) who was cursed by David, and who 'gat him home to his house and hanged himself' after Absalom rejected his counsel.

I. ii. 40. yea-forsooth knave. The reference is to the mild oaths employed by the Puritanical middle-class tradespeople of Shakespeare's own day. Cf. Hotspur's ridicule of this same trait in 1 Henry IV, III. i. 251 ff.

I. ii. 51-54. Falstaff is here playing with the ancient jest that deceived husbands wear invisible horns. Lightness is obviously used in a double sense, and the old spelling of lanthorn, which emphasizes the horn sides of an Elizabethan lantern, carries out the jest.

I. ii. 57. Paul's. The nave of St. Paul's Cathedral was in Shakespeare's day the business center of London. From eleven to twelve, and three to six, daily, men of all professions and trades congregated there. Men out of work, and masters looking for servants, posted their advertisements on the pillars of the nave. Falstaff is probably referring here to a popular saying, quoted in The Choice of Change, 1598: 'A man must not make choice of three things in three places: of a wife in Westminster, of a servant in Paul's, of a horse in Smithfield; lest he choose a quean, a knave, or a jade.' Smithfield is the great cattle market of London.

I. ii. 61, 62. This episode from The Famous Victories of Henry V is reprinted in Appendix A, see pp. 142, 143.

I. ii. 102. hunt counter. A hunting term meaning to follow the trail in a direction opposite to that which the game has taken. There is also perhaps here a pun on the two Compters, or debtors', prisons in London.

I. ii. 166-168. Blind beggars often had dogs to lead them through the streets.

I. ii. 182. war. 'A poor quibble on the word wax, which signifies increase as well as the matter of the honey-comb.' Johnson.

I. ii. 189-192. An angel was a gold coin, worth upwards of six shillings, which took its name from its device, the archangel Michael. Falstaff is here punning on the word, and in the phrases cannot go and cannot tell, he is perhaps using terms which refer to the circulation of money, meaning 'I cannot pass current. I cannot count as good coin.'

I. ii. 241. spit white. Furnivall quotes Batman uppon Bartholome (1582): 'If the spettle be white viscus, the sicknesse cometh of fleame; if black, of melancholy;—the white spettle not knottie, signifieth health.'

I. ii. 257. bear crosses. Another quibble on coins, many of which were marked with crosses.

I. ii. 259. A three-man beetle is a mallet so heavy that it requires three men to swing it. Filliping the toad, according to Steevens, is a Warwickshire game, in which a toad is placed on the end of a short board placed across a log; the other end of the board is then struck with a mallet, and the toad thrown into the air. If Falstaff took the part of the toad in this game, it would, he implies, require a three-man beetle to fillip one of his size.

I. iii. 36-41. Many emendations have been suggested for this apparently corrupt passage. It is probable that a line has been lost here, but it is possible to understand Lord Bardolph's speech without changing the text. Lord Hastings has just been remonstrating with Lord Bardolph for his pessimism, saying that hope never injured any cause. Lord

Bardolph replies: 'Yes, it does,—if, for example, this present business of war (indeed this very action now contemplated, this cause that is now on foot), lives merely on such desperate hopes as buds which appear too early in the spring; for hope gives less warrant that these buds will become fruit than despair gives that the frosts will destroy them.'

I. iii. 53-55. 'Know how well able our estate is to undergo such a work, and how well able it is to balance the power of our opponent.'

II. i. 36, 37. When Dame Quickly says, 'A hundred mark is a long one,' i.e., a long mark, score, or reckoning, she puns on a hundred marks as a debt and a hundred yard mark at archery.

II. i. 67, 68. rampallian. Elizabethan slang, rascal, rapsallion; used also by Beaumont and Fletcher. Fustilarian, a word coined by Falstaff, suggested by the word fustilugs, a fat, frowsy woman. Catas-trophe, in the sense of conclusion, end; used jocularly here for the posteriors.

II. i. 145. Falstaff has the legal right to demand protection against the just claims of Mistress Quickly, as he is about to set forth for the north on the King's business. The Chief Justice admits his 'power to do wrong' in this matter, but urges him to answer the poor woman's suit in a manner suitable to his reputation as a gentleman and soldier.

II. i. 159. Falstaff tries to comfort Mistress Quickly for the loss of her plate by assuring her that glasses are much more fashionable and pleasanter to drink from than silver goblets.

II. i. 210. 'This is the proper behaviour in fencing.' Falstaff refers to his inattention to the Justice's remarks as a retaliation for the Justice's inattention to his questions in II. 184 ff.

II. ii. 25-31. Shirts were made of holland linen

(worth 'eight shillings an ell,' cf. 1 Henry IV, III. iii. 83). The play on the words holland and low-countries is apparent. The Prince proceeds to assume that Poins's shortage in shirts is due to the fact that his old shirts are serving as garments for his illegitimate children, who 'bawl out' from 'the ruins of his linen.'

II. ii. 95-100. Either Shakespeare or the Page confuses the dream of Hecuba with that of Althea. Althea dreamed that the Fates told her that her newborn son would live only so long as a burning brand on the hearth remained unconsumed. Althea snatched the brand from the hearth, extinguished the fire, and prolonged her son's life.

II. ii. 112. martlemas. Corrupted form of Martinmas, or the Feast of St. Martin, November 11. This day was considered the last day of autumn, and was also the day for salting and hanging the winter's supply of beef. The reference is obviously to Falstaff's hearty old age (cf. All-hallowen summer, 1 Henry IV, I. ii. 177, note), or to Falstaff as a 'martlemas beef.'

II. ii. 127, 128. borrower's cap. A man asking for a loan is always very ready to take off his cap.

II. ii. 130 ff. Most modern editors have rearranged the following speeches, giving to Poins the reading of Falstaff's letter to Hal. The Quarto and Folio arrangement, followed with one exception (cf. Appendix C) in this text, seems more natural. In lines 109, 110 Bardolph evidently gives the letter to the Prince, not to Poins. In line 119 the Prince shows the letter to Poins, but does not necessarily give it to him.

II. ii. 192, 193. The parallel is not striking. Jove took the form of a bull to woo Europa. Hal disguises himself as a waiter to spy upon Falstaff. The leather jerkins are the only connecting link.

II. iv. 36. The ballad sung by Falstaff has been preserved in Percy's Reliques.

II. iv. 52. Another scrap of an old ballad.

II. iv. 91. debuty. Mistress Quickly's pronunciation of deputy, and of Wednesday in line 93, both of which are corrected in the Folio text, indicates that she has a cold in her head.

II. iv. 104, 105. tame cheater. A cant term for a low gamester, especially for a gamester's decoy. Mistress Quickly understands the word in the sense of escheator, or officer of the exchequer. The Cambridge editors suggest the emendation chetah, the hunting leopard, known in Europe as early as the fifteenth century. The sentence, you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound, would indicate at least that Falstaff is playing on the two words cheater and chetah. One would hardly speak of stroking a gamester's decoy.

II. iv. 159. occupy. This word was used only in an obscene sense in Shakespeare's day. From the sixteenth to the nineteenth century it seldom appears in literature.

II. iv. 172. Have we not Hiren here? This phrase, which became proverbial in Elizabethan drama, probably originated in a lost play by George Peele, entitled, The Turkish Mahomet and Hyren (Irene) the Fair Greek. Pistol applies the name to his sword. Mistress Quickly (ll. 189, 190) thinks he is inquiring for some woman.

II. iv. 177, 178. Pistol misquotes from Marlowe's Tamburlaine the Great, Pt. II, IV, iv:

'Holla, ye pamper'd jades of Asia!

What! can ye draw but twenty miles a day?'

II. iv. 192. Another burlesque of contemporary drama. This time Shakespeare puts into Pistol's mouth a reference to Peele's Battle of Alcazar, printed in 1594, in which Muley Mahomet enters with lion's flesh on his sword, which he offers to his wife with the words,

'Feed then and faint not, my fair Calypolis.'

II. iv. 194. Most editors assume that Pistol is speaking bad Italian. The Cambridge editors suggest that it is perhaps bad Spanish, and that he is reading the motto on his Toledo blade. Douce gives an illustration of a sword with a French version of this motto inscribed upon it. Farmer says: 'Pistol is only a copy of Hannibal Gonsaga who vaunted on yielding himself a prisoner, as you may read in an old collection of tales called Wits, Fits, Fancies:

Si Fortuna me tormenta
Il speranza me contenta.'

Whatever the language, the meaning of Pistol's motto is, If Fortune torments me, Hope contents me.

II. iv. 205. shove-groat shilling. Shove-groat was a game which was a cross between shuffle-board and 'pitching pennies.' It was played on a board three feet long and a foot wide, and the object of the players was to shove coins into numbered spaces at the far end of the board.

II. iv. 267. drinks . . . flapdragons. Flapdragon or snapdragon is a sport which consists in snapping raisins or grapes from burning brandy and eating them.

II. iv. 286. An impossible conjunction of planets.

II. iv. 288. fiery Trigon. Poins continues the astrological figure by referring to the red-nosed Bardolph as the fiery Trigon. When the three superior planets were in that division of the zodiac which consisted of the three so-called fiery signs, Aries, Leo, and Sagittarius, they were said to be in the fiery Trigon, or triangle; when they were in Cancer, Scorpio, and Pisces, they were in the watery Trigon, etc.

II. iv. 363. dead elm. Shakespeare mentions elms three times,—here and in The Comedy of Errors, II. ii. 176, and in A Midsummer Night's Dream, IV. i. 49. In both C. of E. and M. N. D. the reference is to the practice of training ivy on elm trees, illustrating the relation of woman to man. Poins is therefore probably referring to the posture of Falstaff and Doll.

III. ii. 28, 29. Sir John Oldcastle and Sir John Fastolfe, with both of whom Falstaff has been identified (cf. 1 Henry IV, this edition, Appendix C 3), were both pages to the Duke of Norfolk in their youth.

III. ii. 33. Skogan. Shakespeare probably took the name from a jest book published in 1565, called Scogin's Jests. This Scogin was the court fool of King Edward IV. It is possible, however, that the reference is to Chaucer's friend, Henry Scogan, described by Ben Jonson in The Fortunate Isles as 'a fine gentleman, and master of arts, of Henry the Fourth's time.'

III. ii. 73. accommodated. This is one of the words which Ben Jonson (Discoveries) refers to as one of 'the perfumed terms of the time.' Bardolph is giving himself airs and imitating the affectations of fashionable gallants.

III. ii. 239. Bullcalf means to say: 'Here, in French crowns, is the equivalent of four English ten-shilling pieces, or ten-shilling pieces with King Henry's head on them.' As a matter of fact Henry VII was the first English king whose head appeared on ten shilling pieces.

III. ii. 264. three pound. Falstaff's followers adopt his own methods. Bardolph has collected four pounds, forty shillings from each of the two men, but decides to keep a commission of twenty-five per cent.

III. ii. 285. gibbets. A brewer's gibbet was the yoke worn across the shoulders for carrying buckets of beer from the vat to the barrels. Falstaff refers to the dexterity with which brewers' men swing the buckets on to the gibbet.

III. ii. 301-303. Sir Dagonet was King Arthur's fool. Arthur's show was an exhibition of archery held annually at Mile-end Green by a society called The Auncient Order, Societie, and Unitie laudable of Prince Arthur and his Knightly Armoury of the Round Table. There were fifty-eight members and each took the name of one of the knights in the old romances.

III. ii. 346. Vice's dagger. The Vice, a character in the old Morality plays, carried a thin wooden dagger.

III. ii. 357. philosopher's two stones. The philosophers' stone is the reputed stone of the alchemists which transmutes base metals into gold. Falstaff decides that Justice Shallow will be as valuable to him as two philosophers' stones!

IV. i. 94-96. This passage is obviously corrupt. The archbishop means in general: 'I make this my quarrel on both public and private grounds, that is, because of the sufferings of the commonwealth and of my own family at the hands of King Henry.' The Archbishop's brother, an adherent of King Richard, had been executed by King Henry's order; cf. 1 Henry IV, I. iii. 270.

IV. i. 117 ff. This contest is described in the first act of Shakespeare's Richard II.

IV. i. 175. consign'd. The Quarto and Folio read confin'd; consign'd is Johnson's emendation. The meaning seems to be that the terms of surrender include the stipulation that the execution of the wishes of the rebels shall be consigned to their own hands.

IV. ii. Shakespeare evidently had no thought of a change of scene, or of pause in action, here. Even the first Folio has no stage direction of exeunt at the end of Scene i., and no indication of scene division. I have kept the conventional modern arrangement for convenience of reference; but the reader should remember that the Archbishop and his party do not leave the stage,—they merely step forward to greet Prince John as he enters.

IV. iii. 125. a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil. Falstaff refers to the old superstition that gold mines were guarded by devils.

IV. iv. S. d. The Jerusalem Chamber. An apartment adjoining the southwest tower of Westminster Abbey, built in the fourteenth century as a guest-chamber, and deriving its name from the tapestries depicting the history of Jerusalem with which it was hung. Since the seventeenth century it has been used as a council chamber.

IV. iv. 33-35. 'Nevertheless when he is incensed he breaks out in fiery fashion like flint; he abounds in caprices as winter abounds in moisture; and he changes his moods as suddenly as water freezes and melts at the edge of a pond at daybreak.' Flaws are the blades of ice seen on the edges of water on winter mornings.

IV. iv. 44-48. 'That the vessel of their united blood may never leak, even though that blood should be mingled with the venom caused by hints and suggestions tending toward discord, which in this age will be sure to be poured in; and even though this venom should work with the strength of aconite or gunpowder.'

IV. iv. 79, 80. 'It seldom happens that the bee, having deposited her comb in dead carrion, leaves the comb and the carrion.' The application is to the Prince and his low company.

IV. v. 161. medicine potable. 'There has long prevailed an opinion that a solution of gold has great medicinal virtues, and that the incorruptibility of gold might be communicated to the body impregnated with it.' Johnson.

IV. v. 198. mode. The key in which music is written, used figuratively and associated with 'mood' in the sense of state of mind.

V. i. 1. cock and pie. The origin of this common Elizabethan oath is obscure. Cock is probably a corruption of God, as in the oath Cock's wounds; and pie is perhaps the Roman service book which was sometimes so called, though the word pie applies more properly to the index of the service book. By Shakespeare's time the meaning of the oath was forgotten, and Justice Shallow doubtless thinks he is swearing by a cock and a magpie.

V. ii. 34. 'Which goes against the grain with one in your position.'

V. ii. 48. This allusion helps to fix the date of the play. Amurath the Fourth succeeded his father on the Turkish throne in 1596. Upon his accession he invited his brothers to dinner and had them all strangled.

V. ii. 123, 124. This strange remark of the Prince seems to mean that inasmuch as his own wild affections and desires died at the moment of his father's death, they are now, as it were, buried with his father. Hence his father may be said to be buried with wild affections, or to have 'gone wild into his grave.'

V. iii. 76. dub me knight. The reference is to the Elizabethan custom of giving the title of knight for the evening to a man who, kneeling to his mistress, drained a mighty bumper to her health.

V. iii. 105. Helicon was the abode of the Muses. Pistol resents having such low fellows as Robin Hood and his men brought into this very grandiloquent literary conversation.

V. v. 31, 32. Pistol quotes two Latin phrases which have no significance here, and then proceeds to mistranslate them. The Latin means literally: it is always the same, for without this there is nothing.

Epil. Shakespeare's authorship of this epilogue has been questioned. The dancer says it is of his own making, but he speaks for the author in promising a continuation of the play and in assuring the audience that Falstaff is not Sir John Oldcastle (cf. note on III. ii. 28, 29, and Appendix C 3 to 1 Henry IV, in the present edition). It is interesting to note that Shakespeare's original intention was to continue the Falstaff plot through the play of Henry V; but, as Coleridge remarks, 'Agin-court is not the place for the splendid mendacity of Falstaff. With the coronation of Henry V opens a new period of glorious enthusiasm and patriotic fervor. There is no longer any place for Falstaff on earth; he must find refuge in "Arthur's bosom."'

Epil. 38. pray for the queen. It was the custom to end plays with a prayer for the sovereign. This custom originated in the interludes.

APPENDIX A

SOURCES OF THE PLAY

The principal source of the main plot of this play is the 1587 edition of The Chronicles of England, Scotland, and Ireland, by Raphael Holinshed. Samuel Daniel's poem, The Civill Wars of England (1595), or its source, may well have had some influence. Several incidents in the comic plot are taken, apparently, from the play The Famous Victories of Henry V, first acted in 1588, licensed in 1594, and published in 1598.

Holinshed's Chronicle

According to Holinshed, the Earle of Northumberland was pardoned by the king after the battle of Shrewsbury in 1403. But in 1405 when 'the king was minded to haue gone into Wales against the rebels that vnder their cheeftane Owen Glendower ceassed not to doo much mischeef against the English subiects,' he was 'further disquieted' by a 'conspiracie put in practise against him at home by the Earle of Northumberland who had conspired with Richard Scroope, Archbishop of Yorke, Thomas Mowbraie earle marshall,' and others. 'The King aduertised of these matters left his iournie into Wales and marched with all speed toward the north parts. Also Rafe Neuill earl of Westmerland, that was not farre off, together with the lord Iohn of Lancaster, the king's sonne, being informed of this rebellious attempt, assembled together such power as they might make . . . made forward against the rebels, and coming into a plaine within the forrest of Galtree caused their standards to be pitched downe in the like sort as the Archbishop had pitched his ouer against them, being farre stronger in number of people than the other, for as some write there were of the rebels at least twentie thousand men.'

Shakespeare follows Holinshed closely in describing the 'subtill policie' whereby the rebels are disposed of; but he transfers the odium attaching to this action from the earl of Westmoreland to Lord John of Lancaster.

The events of the next eight years, as related by Holinshed, are unnoticed in the play. Shakespeare proceeds immediately to the death of the king, and again follows the Chronicle closely. '1413. The morrow after Candlemas daie began a parlement which the king had called at London, but he departed this life before the same parlement was ended; for now that his prouisions were readie and that he was furnished with sufficient treasure, soldiers, capteins, vittels, munitions, tall ships, strong gallies, and all things necessarie for such a roiall iournie as he pretended to take into the holie land, he was eftsoones taken with a sore sicknesse, which was not a leprosie stricken by the hand of God, as foolish friars imagined, but a verie apoplexie. . . . During this sicknesse he caused his crowne to be set on a pillow at his bed's head, and suddenlie his pangs so sore troubled him that he laie as though all his vitall spirits had beene from him departed. Such as were about him couered his face with a linen cloth. The prince, his sonne, being hereof aduertised, entered into the chamber, tooke awaie the crowne, and departed. The father being suddenlie reuiued out of that trance quicklie perceiued the lacke of his crowne; and hauing knowledge that the prince his sonne had taken it awaie caused him to come before his presence requiring of him what he meant so to misuse himself. The prince with a good audacitie answered, Sir, to mine and all mens iudgements you seemed dead in this world, wherefore I as youre next heire apparent tooke that as mine owne, and not as yours. Well, faire sonne, said the king with a great sigh, what right I had to it God knoweth. Well, said the prince, if you die king, I will haue the garland and trust to keepe it with the sword against all mine enemies as you haue done. Then said the king, I commit all to God, and remember you to doo well. With that he turned himself in his bed and shortlie after departed to God in a chamber of the abbats of Westminster called Ierusalem, . . . when he had reigned thirteene yeares in great perplexitie and little pleasure.'

Holinshed then tells us that 'king Henrie the fift was crowned the ninth of Aprill, being Passion Sundaie, which was a sore, ruggie, and tempestuous daie, with wind, snow, and sleet, that men greatlie marvelled thereat, making diuerse interpretations what that might signifie. But this king, to show that in his person princelie honors should change publike manners, he determined to put on him the shape of a new man. For whereas aforetime he had made himself a companion vnto misrulie mates of dissolute order and life, he now banished them all from his presence, but not vnrewarded or else vnpreferred, inhibiting them vpon a great paine not once to approach, lodge, or sojourne within ten miles of his court or presence: and in their places he chose men of grauitie, wit, and high policie, by whose wise counsel he might at all times rule to his honor and dignity; calling to mind how once to hie offence of the king his father he had with his fist striken the cheefe iustice for sending one of his minions, vpon desert, to prison, when the iustice stoutlie commanded himself also streict to ward, and the prince obeyed.'

Daniel's Civill Wars

In the fourth book of his Civill Wars, Daniel condenses history even more radically than Shakespeare.

The king falls sick immediately after his victory at Shrewsbury, and is afflicted by spectres of Conscience and Death. He commands

‘some that attending were
To fetch the crowne and set it in his sight;
On which with fixed eye and heauie cheere
Casting a looke, O God, sayeth he, what right
I had to thee my soule doth now conceiue,—
Thee which with blood I got, with horror leave.’

Horror so overwhelms the king that he swoons—

‘When loe his Sonne comes in and takes away
The fatall crowne from thence and out he goes
As if unwilling longer time to lose.’

The king revives, summons the prince, and says:

‘O sonne, what needes thee make such speed
Vnto that care where feare exceeds thy right,
And when his sinne whom thou shalt now succeed
Shall still upbraide thy inheritance of might?
And if thou canst liue, and liue great, from woe, Without this carefull trauaille, let it goe.’

The prince replies:

‘What wrong hath not continuance quite outworne?
Yeeres make that right which neuer was so borne.’

The king dies praying that virtuous deeds and the holy wars of his son may atone for his own sins.

The Famous Victories of Henry V

In this crude play Prince Hal is twice committed to prison, once by the Lord Mayor for rioting in the streets after a merry evening at the tavern in Eastcheap, and once by the Lord Chief Justice for giving him ‘a box on the ear’ upon his refusal to pardon one of the prince’s companions who has been convicted of highway robbery.

The following are characteristic selections:

Enter Henry the fourth, with the earle of Exeter and the earle of Oxford.

Oxf. Please your maiestie, heere is my Lord maior and the sheriffe of London.

King Hen. 4. Admit them to our presence.

Enter the Maior and the Sheriffe.

Now, my good Lord Maior of London, the cause of my sending to you at this time is to tel you of a matter which I have learned of my counsell: Herein I understand that you haue committed my sonne to prison without our leaue and license. What although he be a rude youth and likely to give occasion, yet you might haue considered that he is a Prince and my sonne, and not to be halled to prison by euery subiect.

Maior. May it please your maiestie to give us leaue to tell our tale.

King Hen. 4. Or else God forbid, otherwise you might think me an vnequall Iudge, hauing more affection to my sonne then to any rightfull iudgement.

Maior. Then if it please your Maiestie, this night betwixt two and three of the clocke of the morning, my Lord the young Prince with a very disordered companie, came to the olde Tauerne in Eastcheape, and whether it was that their Musicke liked them not, or whether they were ouercome with wine, I know not, but they drew their swords and into the street they went, and some toke my Lord the yong Princes part, and some tooke the other, but betwixt them there was such a bloodie fray for the space of half an houre, that neither watchmen nor any other could stay them, till my brother the Sheriffe of London and I were sent for, and at the laste with much adoo we staid them, but it was long first, which was a great disquieting to all your louing subiects thereabouts: and then my good Lord, we knew not whether your grace had sent them to trie vs, whether we would doe iustice, or whether it were of their owne voluntarie will or not, we cannot tell, and therefore for our owne safegard we sent him to ward where he wanteth nothing that is fit for his grace.

King Hen. 4. Stand aside vntill we haue further deliberated on your answere.

Exit Maior.

Hen. 4. Ah Harry, Harry, now thrice accursed Harry,

That hath gotten a sonne which with greefe
Will end his fathers dayes.

Oh my sonne, a Prince thou art, I a Prince
indeed,

And to deserue punishment

And well haue they done, and like faithfull subjects:

Discharge them and let them go.

. . . . .

A little later the Lord Chief Justice is conducting the trial of one Cuthbert Cutter, a follower of Prince Hal's, for having robbed 'a poore Carrier vpon Gads hill in Kent.' The Prince enters, with 'Ned and Tom,' and demands the release of his man who has but robbed 'in iest.' The Chief Justice is courteous but resolute.

Hen. 5. Tell me, my lord, shall I haue my man?

Iudge. I cannot, my lord.

Hen. 5. But will you not let him go?

Iudge. I am sorrie his case is so ill.

Hen. 5. Tush, case me no casings, shall I haue my man?

Iudge. I cannot, nor I may not, my lord.

Hen. 5. No: then I will haue him.

He giueth him a box on the eare.

Ned. Gogs wounds, my lord, shal I cut off his head?

Hen. 5. No, I charge you draw not your swords,
But get you hence, prouyde a noyse of Musitians,
Away, be gone.

Exeunt the Theefe.

Judge. Well, my Lord, I am content to take it at your hands.

Hen. 5. Nay, and you be not you shall haue more.

Judge. Why, I pray you, my Lord, who am I?

Hen. 5. You, who knowes not you?

Why man, you are the Lord chiefe Justice of England.

Judge. Your grace hath said truth, therefore in striking me in this place, you greatly abuse me, and not me onely but also your father: whose liuely person here in this place I doo represent. And therefore to teach you what prerogatiues meane, I commit you to the Fleete, Vntill we haue spoken to your father.

Hen. 5. Why then belike you meane to send me to the Fleete?

Judge. I, indeed, and therefore carry him away.

Exeunt Hen. 5. with the Officers.

The scene of the Prince's repentance and reconciliation with his father, which Shakespeare uses in 1 Henry IV, in The Famous Victories immediately precedes the following scene in the King's death-chamber. The King is sleeping.

Enter Lord of Exeter and Oxford.

Exe. Come easily, my Lord, for waking of the King.

Hen. 4. Now, my Lords.

Oxf. How doth your Grace feelee yourselfe?

Hen. 4. Somewhat better after my sleepe,

But good my lords take off my crowne,
 Remove my chair a little backe, and set me right.
Ambo. And please your grace, the crowne is taken away.

Hen. 4. The Crowne taken away,
 Good my lord of Oxford, go see who hath done
 this deed:
 No doubt tis some vilde traitor that hath done it,
 To depriue my sonne. They that would do it now
 Would seeke to scrape and scrawle for it after my death.

Enter Lord of Oxford with the Prince.

Oxf. Here and please your Grace,
 Is my Lord the yong Prince with the Crowne.

Hen. 4. Why how now my sonne?
 I had thought the last time I had you in schooling,
 And do you now begin againe?
 Doest thou thinke the time so long
 That thou wouldest haue it before the Breath be out of my mouth?

Hen. 5. Most soueraign Lord, and welbeloued
 father,
 I came into your Chamber to comfort the melancholy
 Soule of your bodie, and finding you at that time
 Past all recouerie, and dead to my thinking,
 God is my witness: and what should I doo
 But with weeping tears lament the death of you my father,
 And after that seeing the Crowne I tooke it:
 And tell me my father, who might better take it then I,
 After your death? But seeing you liue

I most humbly render it into your Maiesties hands

And the happiest man aliue, that my father liue:
And liue my Lord and Father for euer.

Hen. 4. Stand vp my sonne,
Thine answere hath sounded wel in mine eares,
For I must nedes confesse that I was in a very sound sleepe.

But come neare my sonne,
And let me put thee in possession whilst I liue.

Hen. 5. Well may I take it at your maiesties hands,
But it shall neuer touch my head so long as my father liues.

He taketh the crowne.

The King blesses his son, prophesies a glorious reign, calls for music, draws the curtains of his bed, and dies. After the coronation of the new King there is a conversation between the King and three of his old followers, Ned, Tom, and Iockey, who accost him as he appears in state with the Archbishop of Canterbury, and remind him of his promise to make Ned Lord Chief Justice.

Hen. 5. I prethee Ned, mend thy manners,
And be more modester in thy tearmes,
For my vnfeigned greefe is not to be ruled by thy flattering
And dissembling talke. Thou saiest I am chaunged,
So I am indeed, and so must thou be and that quickly,
Or else I must cause thee to be chaunged.

Tom. I trust we haue not offended your grace no way.

Hen. 5. Ah, Tom, your former life greeues me,
And makes me to abandon and abolish your company for euer.

And therefore not vpon paine of deeth to ap-
 , proch my presence
 By ten miles space. Then if I heare wel of you,
 It may be I will do somewhat for you,
 Otherwise looke for no more fauour at my hands
 Then at any other mans. And therefore be gone,
 We haue other matters to talke on.

Exeunt Knights.

APPENDIX B

THE HISTORY OF THE PLAY

The success of Henry IV, Part I, led Shakespeare, apparently, to write the second part as a sequel. The date of its composition may be definitely stated as lying somewhere between 1596 and 1599. The death of Amurath III, to which reference is made in V. ii. 48, occurred in 1596; and in Ben Jonson's Every Man out of his Humour (Act V. sc. ii.), written in 1599, reference is made to Justice Silence. That Henry IV, Part II, was written before Henry V is evidenced by the unfulfilled promise in the Epilogue of the present play (see the note on that passage).

An acting version of the play, the only known contemporary Quarto edition, was printed in 1600 and entered on the Stationers' Register on August 23 of that year. The full text of the play appeared for the first time in the First Folio in 1623. Of the many contemporary allusions to the play of Henry IV and the characters of the play, the following refer unquestionably to Part II.

(1) Sir Charles Percy, third son of the twentieth Earl of Northumberland, Lord of Dumbleton in Gloucestershire, a follower of the Earl of Essex, and an admirer, perhaps a friend, of Shakespeare's, writes in a letter dated December 27, 1600 (?): "I am here so pestered with country business that I shall not be able as yet to come to London. If I stay here long in this fashion, at my return you will find me so dull that I shall be taken for Justice Shallow or Justice Silence."

(2) Dekker in Satiromastix (1602), Ad Lectorem, refers to Master Justice Shallow.

(3) Ben Jonson in Epicæne (1609), II. v., refers to Doll Tearsheet.

Of early performances and players of Henry IV, Part II, there are even fewer records than there are of Part I. James Wright in his Historia Histrionica (1699) says that 'before the wars' Lowin acted Falstaff 'with mighty applause.' Pepys, who attended at least three revivals of the first part of the play between 1660 and 1668, makes no mention of any Restoration revival of the second part. In 1700 Betterton, after a triumphant revival of Part I, undertook a revision and revival of Part II. His version held the stage for many years, and is reprinted in Lacy's Acting Edition of Old Plays. Chetwood tells an amusing anecdote concerning Betterton's interpretation of the part of Falstaff in Part II. Johnson, an actor, while playing in Dublin, had seen Baker, a master-pavior, play Falstaff. Upon his return to England he gave Mr. Betterton the manner of Baker's playing, which the great actor not only approved of, but imitated, and allowed that it was better than his own.

Betterton's arrangement of the play was as follows:

Act I begins with I. ii.; then follow the scene at the Archbishop's, and the arrest of Falstaff from Act II.

Act II contains the rest of Shakespeare's Act II, with the Warkworth Castle scenes omitted.

Act III begins with the scene at Shallow's house, but the rest of the act follows Shakespeare.

Act IV begins with the King's soliloquy on sleep, taken from Act III; then comes the scene of the King's death, followed by the scene in which Silence sings; and the act closes with the interview between the Lord Chief Justice and King Henry V.

In Act V, Betterton omits the comic scenes (i. and iv.), and opens the act with the King's progress to Westminster Abbey. Falstaff is rebuked, but is not sent to the Fleet, and the play concludes with an abridgment of the first Act of Henry V.

Betterton had the good taste not to tamper with Shakespeare's wording to any great extent.

On December 17, 1720, at Drury Lane, the play was revived again. It was acted five nights successively and once afterwards. It was in this revival that Cibber first appeared as Justice Shallow and made 'one of the great successes of the day.' Mills was Falstaff, and Wilks the Prince. Eleven years later (1731) came another Drury Lane revival, with Mills as the Prince, Harper as Falstaff, and Cibber still playing Shallow. Five years later (1736) the same company, with the exception of Harper, produced the play again at Drury Lane for the benefit of the great Quin, who played Falstaff. In 1744 and 1749 there were revivals at the Covent Garden Theatre, Quin again playing Falstaff.

A performance at Drury Lane in 1758 was made notable by Garrick's first appearance in the rôle of the King. He had appeared as Hotspur in Part I twelve years before, but had not achieved great success in that rôle. As the King in Part II 'his figure did not assist him, but the forcible expression of his countenance, and his energy of utterance, made ample amends for the defect of person.'

On December 11, 1761, and for twenty-two consecutive days, King Henry IV, Part II, was presented at Covent Garden in honor of the coronation of King George III. For this performance an elaborate coronation pageant was devised which was used again in 1821 by Macready at the time of the coronation of William IV. Other revivals occurred at Drury Lane in 1764 and 1777, and at Covent Garden in 1773, 1784, and 1804. A sensational feature of the 1773 performance was the appearance of an anonymous 'Gentleman' as the King, 'his first performance on any stage,' and of Mrs. Lessingham, for whose benefit the play was given, as Prince Hal. In the 1804 production John Philip Kemble played the King, and Charles Kemble the Prince. Charles Kemble again appeared as the Prince in Macready's production in June, July, and August, 1821.

Of Macready's performance he himself writes in his Reminiscences; 'Kemble had revived the play in 1804, but produced little effect. Garrick had not given the prominence he had expected to the part of the King, and for these reasons I begged to be excused from appearing in it. But my objections were set aside. . . . To every line of it I gave the most deliberate attention, and felt the full power of its pathos. The audience hung intently on every word. The admission of the perfect success of the performance was without dissent. The revival rewarded the managers with houses crowded to the ceiling for many nights, nor was this attributable to the pageant only, for the acting was of the highest order. Fawcett was the best Falstaff then upon the stage, but he more excelled in other parts.' The perfection of Macready's success was not, however, 'without dissent.' 'An old playgoer,' in a letter to Tallis's Dramatic Magazine for April, 1851, says of Macready's Henry IV: "In this rôle he approached nearest to an elocutionist, but generally the effect of his declamation was unpleasant, harsh, and grating. Kemble's poses were studied but graceful, not like the stiff upright posés of Macready wherein I have often wondered how he could preserve his equilibrium."

On March 17, 1853, in his ninth season at Sadler's Wells, Samuel Phelps produced King Henry IV, Part II, he himself playing the double rôle of the King and Justice Shallow. Contemporary reviews speak of his complete triumph, and say that sceptical critics are now converted to this as a stage play. Phelps used Betterton's version, and revived the play again in London in 1864 and in 1874. In the 1874 production Forbes-Robertson, aged 21, appeared as Prince Hal. William Winter records an interesting anecdote of the first rehearsal. Phelps, after watching Forbes-Robertson for a time, said: 'Young man, I see that you know nothing about this. Come to my room tonight.'

The play has been practically unknown on the American stage. There were twenty-six revivals of Part I in America in the eighteenth century, but apparently none of Part II. In the nineteenth century the American comedian, James H. Hackett, played the part of Falstaff almost annually from 1830 to 1870, in both England and America, but it was the Falstaff of Part I and of The Merry Wives. In 1895-1896 Miss Julia Marlowe played the part of Prince Hal in an abridged version of the two parts of the play; and in 1896-1897 Daly planned a revival which never got beyond rehearsal. Miss Ada Rehan was to play Prince Hal, and James Lewis, Falstaff. The Delta Psi Dramatic Club of Harvard University gave a creditable amateur performance of Part II in the winter of 1915-1916.

APPENDIX C

THE TEXT OF THE PRESENT EDITION

The text of the present edition is, in the main, by permission of the Oxford University Press, that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig. Stage directions, when not bracketed, are from either the First Quarto or the First Folio or both; bracketed stage directions are modern. The title of the play is from the First Quarto. The Dramatis Personæ are as given in the First Folio under the caption 'The Actors' Names.'

In II. ii. 131-149 the present editor has substituted the original assignment of speeches, in ll. 131, 135, as found in both Quarto and Folio, for Craig's assignment, as there seems to be no sufficient reason for emendations. He has also assigned ll. 139-148 to the Prince. Craig divides as follows:

131-133 Poins. Sir John . . . certificate.

134 Prince. Peace.

135-149 Poins. I will . . . eat it.

Many minor departures from the Oxford text have been made in this edition in an attempt to arrive at a consistent text. The Oxford editor has in the majority of cases followed the readings of the First Quarto, but in about fifty instances he has adopted the slightly different expressions used in the more formal and less colloquial Folio text. For example, in the scenes of low comedy, he in the Folio is almost invariably a' in the Quarto; is it is is 't; it is is 'tis; etc. The Oxford editor has used sometimes the formal, sometimes the informal expression. He sometimes follows the Folio in correcting the grammar and the mispronunciations of Mistress Quickly and Justice Shallow, and sometimes does not; he frequently omits the oaths found in the Quarto and expurgated in the Folio, but more frequently includes them. The present editor has not thought it wise to burden his pages with a long list of the minor changes he has made in the Oxford text. His policy has been to follow, in general, the more colloquial Quarto text.

In the following list of other variants the readings of the present edition precede the colon, Craig's readings follow it, and the Quarto or Folio authority is given wherever involved:
